Pennsylvania Officials: DHIA Set For Future

EVERETT NEWSWANGER
Managing Editor

MONROEVILLE (Allegheny Co.)—With an up-beat tenor, officials of the Pennsylvania DHIA took the opportunity at the annual meeting late last week to say the state organization was moving ahead with new and flexible programs to meet every dairy farmer's need and selective desire. And with the newly approved national by-laws that eliminate geographical boundaries, President Frank Orner said the board of directors took "a real hard look to get in position for the competitive arena DHIA seems to be taking on.

"We need to put the past behind and look to the future," Orner said. "We need to improve the organization, make things better for the members, look at the opportunities in each situation instead of dwelling on what we are losing.

"Sometimes we look at the big picture; at the same time we don't want to forget the little problems because they could become the big problems we deal with down the line. Don't be afraid to share your concerns, large or small, with the directors."

Because Extension has received decreased funding from state appropriations, Orner announced a cooperative joint effort with Northeast DHIA to fund research projects. "We rely heavily on work that extension does for the development of new programs and programs we are working with now," Orner said. "We hope a year from now we will be able to have some proposals of items we can be working on jointly between Penn State and Cornell and between some other universities in northeastern U.S."

Beside this joint research project, Orner said Pennsylvania has been working with Northeast and

Phila. Rep. Wants More Benefits For Farmworkers

VERNON ACHENBACH, JR.

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — A state Democratic representative from Philadelphia Thursday introduced a package of legislative proposals into the House of Representatives that would increase the cost to hire farmworkers, in an effort to make farmworker benefits here coincide with benefits afforded industrial laborers.

The proposal would alter three main labor laws — the 1936 Unemployment Compensation Law; the 1937 Pennsylvania Labor Relations Act, dealing with collective bargaining and unionizing; and the 1978 Seasonal Farm labor Act.

Sponsoring the bill, state Rep. Mark Cohen, House majority Whip, would not consent to a telephone interview because of a busy schedule, according to Michael Cassidy, his assistant.

However, this past week Cohen introduced the proposed legisla-

FDA's VMAC Sets Public Hearing On BST

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.

WASHINGTON D.C. — The controversial bovine growth hormone, otherwise known as bovine somatotropin (BST), is apparently nearing the end of its official Food and Drug Administration review process.

If no valid objections can be made to the use of manufactured BST, it can be expected that the biotechnological product would make its entry onto the U.S. commercial market late this summer or fall, according to observers.

Several manufacturers with rights to produce BST-like products have been waiting for years for a go-ahead decision from FDA to make the product available commercially.

The companies may not have to wait much longer, pending the outcome of testimony scheduled to be given during a three-hour period March 31.

According to a not-widely circulated announcement, a veterinary advisory committee to the FDA is to meet March 31 at the Holiday Inn in Gaithersburg, Md., to discuss the use of commercially manufactured types of bovine somatotropine (BST) for use in cows to stimulate the production of milk.

The national Center for Veterinary Medicine (CVM), part of the FDA, has already concluded that the use of BST does not pose a threat to human health.

But that doesn't mean that it will be received by all the public with open arms.

About the same time as the CVM announcement, two farm organizations and a consumer group lobbied the White House to

DELMARVA BROILER/FRYER MARKET. FEDERAL-STATE

Movement of ready-to-cook whole birds was sluggish. Seller offerings were readily available at several plants and difficult to place. Live supplies were moderate at desirable to heavy weights.

Slaughter schedules were light as some plants trimmed operations and others suspended production. Less than trucklot asking prices were unchanged at 48 to 61 cents; however, discounting remained a factor in clearing excess supplies. Trade sentiment was steady to mostly weak. In the part complex, all items were at least adequate. Wings and breast parts were slow to clear at most plants.

N.E. Chicken Parts

EDISON, NJ.
MARCH 24, 1993

NORTHEAST BROILER/FRYER PARTS - PART I FEDERAL-STATE

Trucklot buying interest was light and heavy wet snow in some parts of New England slowed buying interest even more. Supplies of boneless skinless breasts were at least adequate with most trading at the 1.90 level. Line run breasts were available but some buyers were cautious. Trades were reported at lower prices and buyers bid even lower. Yellow skin legs and leg quarters were adequate and cleared at steady prices while white skin leg quarters were fully adequate at some locations. Wings were fully adequate to ample, offered at competitive prices, and slow to clear.

The Old Farmer's Almanac This Week With Almanac

BUNSEN BURNER DAY, MARCH 31.

THE PONY EXPRESS

On April 3 1860, the first Pony Express rider left St Joseph Missouri, and headed west Although he would travel only 75 to 100 miles (changing horses six to eight times), the mail in his leather bags could be going much farther For $5 10, a half-ounce letter could travel the entire 1 838-mile route to Sacramento, California The goal of ten-day service was sometimes achieved After a rest period, each rider would jump back on a horse and carry a new batch of mail in the other direction The Pony Express service ended, in financial ruin, in October 1861 when the transcontinental telegraph ended all need for it But the legend lives on

Once uttered, words run . faster than horses.

TIP OF THE WEEK

☞ When you've put too much soap in the washing machine, pour in a little salt and the suds will disappear.

OPINION

Six Reasons To Feel Positive

We always thought that farmers are some of the best environmentalists, and now Ronald Hostetler, Penn State Extension, Edensburg sent us data to prove it.

In a national poll of farmers just released by the influential Gallup Organization, not only do farmers share the public's concern for the environment, they are also taking steps to further strengthen environmental stewardship on the farm. In fact, the poll, commissioned by Sandoz Agro, found six reasons to feel downright good about where agriculture is headed with respect to environmental issues.

1. Farmers' concern for the environment has increased. Three out of five farmers say they are more concerned about environmental issues associated with agriculture today than five years ago. They believe contamination of surface or ground water supplies by fertilizers and pesticides is the most serious environmental problem facing agriculture. In fact, water quality is mentioned more than twice as often as other problems. Nearly one-third of farmers rank this as their number-one concern.

2. Farmers are taking responsibility for environmental problems. While some 80% of farmers expect government involvement in farm environmental issues to increase, they would clearly rather regulate themselves. In fact, 39% think farmers themselves should have primary responsibility for fixing environmental problems associated with agriculture. This is almost three times the percentage of farmers placing responsibility with government and almost five times the percentage placing responsibility with agrichemical manufacturers.

Farmers seem to be saying "the buck stops here," and that doesn't surprise me. I don't know a farmer who doesn't feel a strong sense of responsibility to leave the land in better shape than when he or she started farming it.

3. Farmers are making positive changes in their farming operations. Based on the results of the poll, farmers aren't sitting around waiting for someone to make decisions for them. Most already have made some changes as a result of public opinion, especially in the areas of conservation tillage and pesticide use.

They see even more changes in the years ahead: 92% say they are very or somewhat likely to use safer pesticides in the future; 80% are very or somewhat likely to recycle pesticide containers; and 71% are very or somewhat likely to use fewer pesticides.

NOW IS THE TIME

To Install ROPS On Tractors

Each year an average of 132 American farmers are crushed to death as tractors overturn during operation.

Nearly all fatalities resulting from the overturning of a tractor could be prevented. The key to prevention is the presence of a rollover protection structure (ROPS) on every tractor.

Since 1967, 40 percent of the persons involved in tractor rollover accidents with a tractor not equipped with ROPS died while two percent of those persons having accidents with tractors equipped with rollover protection died. The two percent death rate was the result of one accident in which the operator was not using the seat belt.

ROPS may be either enclosed or open; however, a seat belt must be used in conjunction with rollover equipment to keep the operator inside the protective structure during a tractor rollover.

It is estimated that there are 4.61 million tractors in the United States. Of these, more than half are not equipped with ROPS or seat belts. At least on tractor manufacturer is offering ROPS at a reduced cost.

Regardless of the cost, your life is worth far more than the cost of ROPS and seat belt. Now is the time to install ROPS and seat belts on all possible tractors.

To Control Thistles

Biennial thistles are a common problem in many pastures throughout the area.

According to Robert Anderson, extension agronomy agent, the best time to control these pest weeds is in the spring prior to elongation of the flower stalk. Bull thistle may be effectively controlled with 2,4-D. A combination of 2,4-D and Banvel is more effective against the musk thistle.

Ally and Crossbow will also control these problem thistles. Although mowing may help prevent seed production, most thistles will produce a secondary flower stalk after mowing and if not mowed a second time will produce seeds.

When spraying a herbicide on a pasture, it is important to read and follow all directions including grazing restrictions for livestock. Grazing restrictions may range from 0 to 60 days depending on the product, rate of application, and type of livestock being grazed.

To Evaluate Small Grain Fields

Most of the small grains went into this past winter in fairly good shape. However, some fields do show damage because of winter growing conditions and herbicide carryover.

Before fields put on too much new growth, it may be worth spending a little time evaluating them. Fields with low numbers of plants will have reduced yields at harvest time. If the stand looks thin, spend time counting the number of plants at several representative sites in each field. This may require that you get down on your hands and knees so that individual plants, not stems and tillers, are counted.

Using a 10-foot tape or string, count the number of plants at 7 to 8 locations. After the counts have been made, calculate the average number of plants per foot by adding the number of plants at each location and dividing by the total number of feet that the plants were counted in.

Depending on row spacing, the minimum number of plants needed to produce an acceptable yield are 6 inch row spacing — 7 plants, 7 inch — 8 plants, and 10 inch — 12 plants.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS
BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

DON'T YOU CARE, GOD?
March 28, 1993

Background Scripture:
John 11:1-44.

Devotional Reading:
John 11:45-54.

Many of us at some points in our lives have either asked that question or wanted to: "Don't you care, God?"

Probably much more of the latter than the former, for most of us feel that doubts and complaints to God are not to be felt, if possible, and, if felt, not to be acknowledged. When we feel those questions rising from within us, many of us do our best to push them back down into the unconscious.

One of the places we do NOT get that impression is the Bible. There are lots of people in the Bible who dare to question and even argue with God and he does not appear to think the less of them for it. In fact: some of the best things that happen there are those that result from wrestling spiritually with God — like Jacob, like Job, like some of the prophets and sometimes like the psalmists.

QUESTIONS & COMPLAINTS

John 11, the story of the raising of Lazarus is another example. Here, some of the hardest questions and complaints are raised. Some of the bystanders who saw Jesus come to Lazarus' tomb ask, "Come not he who opened the eyes of the blind man have kept this man from dying?" (11:37) Mary and Martha change the question into an accusation: "Lord, if you had been here, my brother would not have died" (11:21, 32). Note that Jesus' failure to arrive in Bethany before Lazarus died was not because of a miscalculation on his part or some mishap or delay along the way. "Jesus told them plainly, 'Lazarus is dead; and for your sake I am glad that I was not there, so that you may believe'" (11:14). He had previously hinted to them that "This illness is not unto death; it is for the glory of God, so that the Son of God may be glorified by means of it" (11:4).

What Jesus is saying here is that he does love Lazarus and is concerned about him, but because there is a higher purpose to be served, the glory of God, he will not hasten to his friend's bedside as everyone wants him to do. Having almost 2,000 years of hindsight in our favor, we understand very well why Jesus did not respond to the request immediately. I believe there are times in our lives today when it seems God is not responding to our earnest prayers and we must remember that there may be a higher purpose to God's seeming non-response, a purpose that seeks our good in a way that is beyond our immediate comprehension.

A HIGHER PURPOSE

But that doesn't mean we should not ask our hard questions of God or even let him know when we are disturbed at his delay. Jesus was reproached by both Mary and Martha, yet he did not reproach them in turn. He understood why they said what they said and valued their sincerity much more than any pious deception. We need to remember that, too

There are many times in life when we will be discouraged, hurt, and even resentful. When that happens, don't hesitate to share your true feelings with the Lord and ask "why?" and "why not?" But when you have asked your questions and made your complaints, remember that Jesus is "the resurrection and the life" with the power to command on both sides of the grave, "Unbind him, and let him go!" (11:44)

Space For Irrigation Expo Selling Fast

ARLINGTON, VA. — Seventy-five percent of the booth space for the Irrigation Association's 1993 International Irrigation Exposition and Technical Conference has been sold. The four-day event will be held Oct. 31 - Nov. 3 at the San Diego Convention Center.

Of the 450 booths available for the 1993 Expo, more than 300 have been sold to irrigation companies around the country based on a priority point system which the association instituted years ago.

The association is also implementing a number of new marketing plans which are expected to increase show attendance. Among other things, the association has lowered registration rates by 30 percent and will be kicking off an expanded advertising campaign

The IA Expo is devoted exclusively to irrigation products and services. For more information about exhibiting or for more information about the program, call the Irrigation Association at (703) 524-1200.

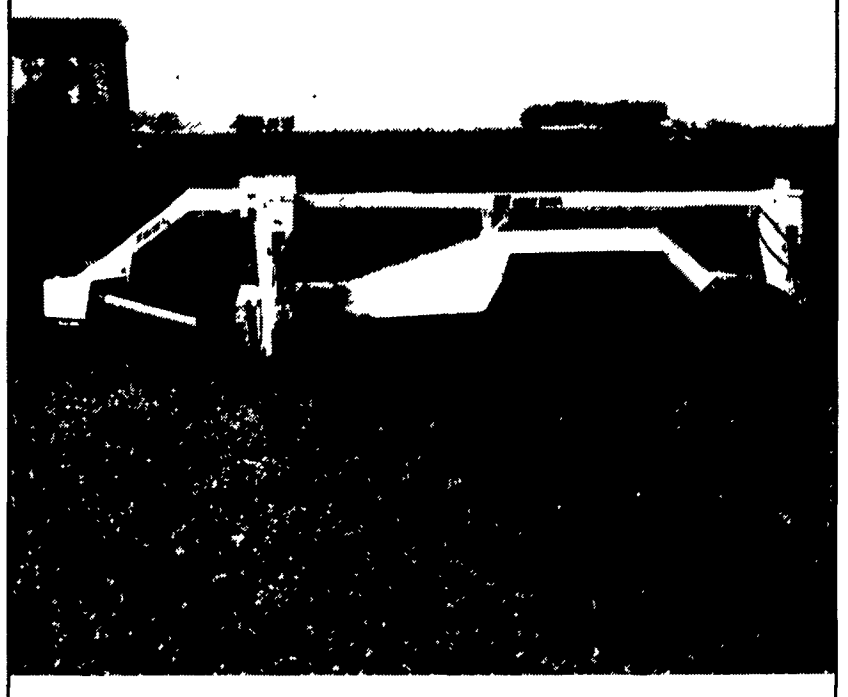
Cuts more than hay. Cuts time.



New Idea 5212 Disc Mower Conditioners cut a big 11'9" swath and condition with 9'6" intermeshing rolls. It's a wider version of our well-known 5209. With it, you cut and condition lots of hay...every trip. And that means you cut time.

Because the New Idea modular disc cutterbar design makes routine maintenance simple and, although unlikely, repairs a breeze; there's less downtime, too.

Best of all, you'll find our disc mower conditioners are just one segment of our hay equipment line. Others include round balers, disc mowers, sickle mowers and mower conditioners, rakes and hay handling equipment.

Agway Seed Corn.
Bred with three things in mind: location, location, location.

"We've been using Agway seed corn for a long time. We always plant other companies' varieties for comparison, but none have done better than our Agway varieties."

David R. Smith

The only growing conditions that count are yours. So we customize our hybrids, whether for silage or grain, to fit your growing season, your soil type, your rainfall. Specifically, your location.

Yield? Standability? Outstanding. Just ask your Agway Crop Sales Specialist, Reading-Bone or Andgrow salesperson. Then simply try a field of the variety that's designed for your area. And find out how Agway research benefits the only customer that counts. Specifically, you.

PFA Members Head For Harrisburg

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — About 400 farmers from around the state will travel to Harrisburg, Monday, March 29, to discuss priority legislative issues with their state lawmakers. The meetings will be part of the annual Harrisburg Legislative Tour sponsored by the Pennsylvania Farmers' Association (PFA).

PFA is a voluntary, general farm organization which represents 23,189 member families in 54 local county associations. The farmers participating in the Harrisburg Tour are members of county association state legislative committees.

"Many of the things that affect agriculture happen outside the farmers' fence line," said PFA president Keith Eckel, "The Harrisburg tour gives our members the opportunity to personally explain to their legislators what these issues are, how they affect us and what should be done about it. Our recommendations will be based on grass-roots policy developed by our organization."

Issues farmers will discuss during the Harrisburg Tour will include:

Workers' Compensation Reform — Workers compensation costs doubled from 1986 to 1990 and without reform will double again by 1994. Flaws in the current system allow benefits that exceed what an employee would make at work and which continue long after an employee could return to work. PFA is supporting Senate Bill 1 which would put caps on Workers' Compensation medical and wage benefits.

Vet School Funding — Last year the state failed to provide any funding for the University of Pennsylvania's School of Veterinary Medicine — the only such school in the state. The total elimination of funding which accounted for 40% of the school's operating budget threatens to close the doors of an education, research and diagnostic center that supports Pennsylvania's number one industry — agriculture. PFA is urging passage of supplemental appropriations bills, H.B. 86 and S.B. 248, to restore state funding for the vet school.

Nutrient Management Planning — PFA is supporting efforts to establish a uniform statewide program of nutrient management planning for farmers with high density populations of livestock or

Is Your Farm Worthy To Be Named Dairy Of Distinction? Apply Now For This 1993 Beautification Recognition Program.

EVERETT NEWSWANGER
Managing Editor

COVINGTON (Tioga County)—The Northeast Dairy Farm Beautification Program, Inc., is again looking for applications from nice looking dairy farm to reward the efforts made in beautification. Known as the Dairy of Distinction program, recognition is given to well-kept farmsteads to help with consumer acceptance of dairy products in the store.

State President Dan BAker, a dairyman from Covington, Tioga County, said the program has been well received and program leaders look forward to an excellent program in 1993.

"There are plenty of good looking dairy farms out there that have not been judged," Baker said. "And even those who have entered the selection process in the past years, without success should enter again."

The program provides rewards of recognition to producers who maintain attractive production sites. This recognition benefits the entire dairy industry, as well as individual dairymen. Not only does the favorable publicity generated by the program in the general press help bring modern farm practices to the attention of urban people, farmers use the distinction to promote their own operation or seek and hire farm labor.

Paul Nichols, the secretary for the Pennsylvania program, said applications may be sent to him any time after January 1, 1993. Deadline for applications is April 15. Judging is completed in May and is based on the roadside appearance of buildings, grounds, and surroundings. The states are divided into districts and a local committee oversees the program in each district.

A team of judges designated by the local committee visits each farm and uses a score sheet to rate each farm. In Pennsylvania, in addition to this team of judges, the sanitarian for the farm's cooperative or dealer-handler is asked to be part of the judging process.

"One of the things I always tell people is that even though they may not now have the most fancy place, they can work toward the principles of the Dairy of Distinction program," Nichols said. "By doing this, they work toward a goal that encourages consumers to use more dairy products."

Winners receive a colorful, 18x24-inch Dairy of Distinction sign to be placed at the entrance to the farmstead. In addition, as in past years, an 11x14-inch color portrait of the farm will be given by Lancaster Farming to each winning farm in the Pennsylvania program.

"As a dairy farmer, you work hard all year long, taking care of your farm," said Helen Fountain, program executive secretary. "In addition to managing your herd, there are lawns to mow, flowers to plant, and overall maintenance to keep farm buildings looking great. You deserve to be recognized for all the hard work, dedication and pride you put into your farmstead.

"It's time you and your farm received some recognition for your hard work. The coveted Dairy of Distinction award will give you that recognition, In addition your attractive farm will enhance consumer confidence in the wholesomeness of milk, thereby stimulating milk sales and encourage public support for the dairy industry."

Active dairy farms in New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania are eligible to apply for the award. Criteria for Dairy of Distinction awards include: clean and attractively finished buildings; neat landscaping, ditches, roads and lands; and well-maintained fences. Cleanliness of animals, barnyard, feed areas, as well as manure management, are also taken into consideration.

Applications are available from each state's program secretary or local cooperative extension. In New York, contact Carol Weddle, New York Holstein Assn., 957 Mitchell St., Box 190, Ithica, N.Y. 14851. In New Jersey, contact Angust Knispel, RD 1, Box 325, Pittstown, NJ 08867.

In Pennsylvania, you may contact Paul Nichols, American Dairy Association/Dairy Council, Tower Business Building, 239 Schuyler Ave., Kingston, PA 18704.

The North View Farm of the Calvin and Mary Will family in Somerset County is an example of the farms that were designated Dairy of Distinction last year. You are invited to use the application to have your farm named in 1993.

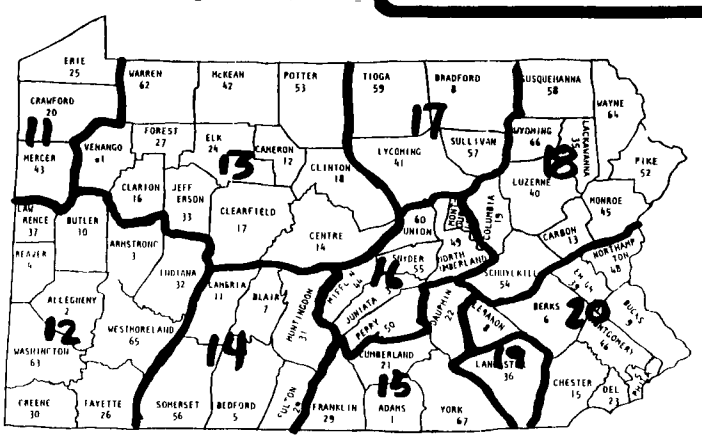
Dairy of Distinction

Dairy Farm Beautification Program



Pennsylvania Districts

Pennsylvania is divided into ten districts. Approximately 10 Dairy of Distinction awards will be made each year in each district. There is no cost to the applicant.

As a winner, you will receive a certificate and a nice metal sign to install at the end of your farm lane. In addition, LANCASTER FARMING will present a color farm portrait print to each of this year's winners in Pennsylvania. If your farm is a winner, be sure you or your district committee takes a color photograph of your farm and sends the negative and proof to LANCASTER FARMING in time for the awards ceremony.

Scholarship To NALJA President

Dwayne Faidley, president of the North American Limousin Junior Association, was selected overall winner in the National Cattlemen's Foundation's Beef Industry Scholarship contest. Faidley's winning essay was entitled "Producing and Marketing Beef Cattle to Meet Consumer Demand."

ENGLEWOOD, Colo. — Dwayne Faidley, president of the North American Limousin Junior Association (NALJA), has been selected overall winner of the National Cattlemen's Foundation Beef Industry Scholarship. The Chicago Mercantile Exchange sponsors the $2,500 stipend.

Faidley, an Iowa State University student, travelled to the National Cattlemen's Association's annual meeting in Phoenix to discuss his winning essay, "Producing and Marketing Beef Cattle to Meet Consumer Demand."

"As an industry, we need to identify what the consumer wants and figure out better ways to supply it," Faidley said. "Youth today have decided not to wait to share responsibility for improving the cattle industry."

Faidley was chosen from more than 100 applicants. Lisa McCain, another NALJA board member, received an honorable mention.

Farm Credit Holds Forum

LEWISBURG (Union Co.) — Northeastern Farm Credit, ACA held their Third Annual Ag Outlook Forum on February 3 and 4 with approximately 286 farmers attending the same one-day seminar offered at two different locations within Northeastern's service territory.

On February 3, farmers gathered at the Country Cupboard Restaurant in Lewisburg and on February 4, at the Tory Vets Club, Troy. A free luncheon buffet was provided by Farm Credit at both meetings.

Topics and speakers included "Farming The Cycles" and "Farming With Family" — Don Rogers, vice president, farm business consulting, Farm Credit Bank of Springfield; "Commodity Outlooks" — Lou Moore and Greg Hanson, Penn State University; and "Tax Strategies to Maximize Farm Business Success" presented by Farm Credit's financial management specialists Dianne Shuck and Duane Mattocks.

Equestrians Gather For Parade

PHILADELPHIA — Equestrians will gather from all parts of the Delaware Valley and beyond for this year's 72nd annual Wissahickon Day Parade.

The parade will begin promptly at noon from Northwestern and Germantown Avenues (known as Harpers Meadow), at the Northwestern tip of the city, and continue along the Wissahickon creek through Fairmount Park along the path known as "Forbidden Drive."

This yearly equestrian parade began in 1921 to celebrate the defeat of an amendment which would have allowed automobiles in the park. The path became known as "Forbidden Drive," because it was thereafter forbidden to the automobile.

The parade is presented by the Riders of the Wissahickon (ROTW) and cosponsored by the Friends of the Wissahickon. The parade features English and Western riders as well as a variety of carriages and costumed riders. Entrants in the different riding divisions will be judged prior to the start of the parade.

Judging begins at 10:30 a.m. at Harpers Meadow (Germantown and Northwestern Avenue) and is open to the public. Ribbons will be awarded to winners in the different categories.

Entertainment begins at 11:30 a.m. in front of Valley Green Inn. There will be pony rides, a petting zoo, and clowns. Refreshments are available. Bring a blanket and spend the day.

HOW TO GET MORE MILEAGE OUT OF CORN SILAGE

Is your corn silage program standing in the way of improved milk production and reduced input costs?

We know that the quality of corn silage can be highly variable from one hybrid to another. But are you content to take your chances with whatever quality of silage your current corn hybrids produce?

Or do you want to get more mileage out of your corn silage?

Cargill Hybrid Seeds has developed a forage quality program that identifies which hybrid within a maturity is best suited for silage production on your farm.

After five years of evaluation, university research and hundreds of on-farm tests, we have built a Quality Index to help simplify the corn hybrid selection process. The Quality Index combines a feeding strategy with quality traits that have the greatest impact on boosting milk production and cutting feed supplement costs.

The Quality Index is part of our corn silage Menu that identifies hybrids with the most important quality traits - energy, protein, fiber and fiber digestibility.

University conducted research supported by Cargill has built the data base for the whole plant quality portion of this menu. Quality principles are developed by the use of in Vitro Rumen Fermentation technology. In Vitro True Digestibility was used to measure whole plant energy. In Vitro Cell Wall Digestibility was used to measure fiber digestibility and correlated to dry matter intake.

Only time-tested hybrids with outstanding corn silage production potential are added to our updated Menu. There's a Menu, such as shown at left, for hybrids adapted to your area.

Don't settle for less than the best. For more information about our exclusive forage quality program, contact your Cargill Hybrid Seeds dealer today or call this toll-free number: 1-800-657-4810

At the 1993 National Silage Production Conference, Syracuse, NY, many experts were in agreement that this concept of evaluating corn hybrids is a worthwhile approach to improving dairy production.

prevent BST from ever being approved.

Representatives of the National Farmers Union, the Consumers Union and the National Family Farm Coalition, reportedly met with members of the staff to Vice President Al Gore to plead for intervention in what the organizations forsee as pending FDA approval.

There is no indication of how much influence on FDA's decision the White House could make. Also, the Clinton Administration's position on BST is also not known.

There was no media announcement of a public hearing on BST coming from FDA. The March 5 memorandum that notifies of the meeting was apparently not intended for the media.

According to the memorandum, the Veterinary Medicine Advisory Committee (VMAC) to the FDA has scheduled the meeting to run from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m., with a period set from 9:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. to allow for public comment.

According to the news release, "During the open committee discussion (from 8:30 a.m. to 9:30 a.m., and from 3 p.m. to 5 p.m.), VMAC will discuss whether the increased incidence of mastitis in dairy cows treated with Monsanto Company's bovine somatotropin product — Sometribove-zinc complex (Sometribove) — as an aid in increasing milk production, and the potential concomitant increase in antibiotic use, represents a risk to human health."

However, the memorandum also states that the CVM has already determined that the concern for human health is not merited. Though the agency did note that it did not treat the issue raised by the GAO frivolously in making its assessment.

"Data in the New Animal Drug Application for Sometribove and in the published literature shows that the increase in mastitis for Sometribove-treated cows is much less than the normal variation in mastitis incidence related to physiological and environmental changes; nevertheless, any increase in mastitis could still result in an overall increase of antibiotic use that could pose a risk to human health if it raised beyond lawful levels, the amount of antibiotics found in milk or meat.

"In this particular case, however, the Center for Veterinary Medicine has reached an initial conclusion that concern regarding potential additional risk to humans resulting from an increased incidence of mastitis due to Sometribove is not warranted. The basis for the center's conclusion will be discussed with the advisory committee."

It is too late for those who have not already registered with the CVM to make public comment.

According to Gary E. Stefan, with the Center for Veterinary Medicine, as of the March 24 deadline, he had already received more requests to address the VMAC than there is scheduled time to allow.

The CVM also would not release a list of those scheduled to speak during the hearing, because of a policy it follows to protect the scheduled speakers from unecessary harassment or approach.

The anti-BST organizations reported on their efforts to gain the interest of the White House. According to a news release from the NFU, "The Food and Drug Administration' apparent willingness to approve a controversial growth hormone for dairy cows could seriously damage American dairy farmers by undermining consumer confidence in milk quality."

According to the release, "Polls have shown that consumers do not want to buy dairy products produced from cows injected with the synthetic hormone.

"In addition, the government's investigative agency, the General Accounting Office (GAO), earlier this month repeated its concern that the FDA has not answered all of the questions surrounding the impact of synthetic (BST) on dairy herds."

The Farmers Union has opposed BST because its members perceive a devastating impact on the dairy economy, based on consumers' reaction to the drug.

There are also those who oppose approval out of fear that BST will drive family farmers out of business, because they suspect use of the drug will cause a glut of milk and lower on-the-farm milk prices.

These people can't see any reason for using a product that makes the cow work harder than she already is.

As a hormone, BST acts within the body of the cow to direct nutrients to the milk-making area of the cows, resulting in the manufacture by the cow, of more milk. Nutritional requirements by the cow also increase with the manufacture of more milk.

There is no method to detect the difference between milk from a cow treated with BST and milk from a cow not treated.

In some cases, groups have sought to bypass this lack of ability to make a distinction between the milks. One group has recommended forcing dairies to put consumer warning labels on milk containers if they use any milk coming from farms where BST is used.

poultry. The program contained in H.B. 100 would protect water quality from the runoff of excess animal waste and would place farmers under the regulatory umbrella of a single state agency, the State Conservation Commission. The legislation would also create a Nutrient Management Advisory Committee to help guide the program.

DER Advisory Board — An "agricultural advisory committee" to the Department of Environmental Resources (DER) has been operating for several years, but its function and membership has never been defined by regulation or law. As environmental issues take on greater emphasis in government, PFA believes it is important that DER has access to advice and expertise regarding normal farming practices. PFA is supporting S.B. 298 which would legally and formally establish an ag advisory board. The board would include representatives from production agriculture and would have advance notice of any regulations affecting agriculture.

Seasonal Farm Labor — PFA has strong reservations about proposals recently announced by House Majority Whip Mark Cohen to further regulate employers of all farmworkers. Many of the proposals duplicate laws and regulations already in place at the state and federal level. One proposal, to apparently require farmers to guarantee the amount of harvest work offered, ignores the vagaries of weather and could force farmers out of fruit or vegetable production.

Water Resources Management — The reoccurrence of drought conditions during the past several years has focused attention on the vulnerability of the state's water resources. PFA is supporting S.B. 351 which would require DER to develop a state water plan with the advice of a state Water Resource Advisory Committee and local advisory committees. DER would be authorized to protect areas with special needs. High-volume water users would be subject to DER regulation.

Local Tax Reform — Because of their dependence on land to grow crops and raise livestock, farmers shoulder a bigger real estate tax burden than other taxpayers. PFA recommends the enactment of local tax reform to allow local taxing authorities to replace nuisance taxes and reduce real estate taxes with a mixture of income and property taxes.

High Power Transmission Lines — PFA is supporting legislation, H.B. 381, which would require electric utilities to seek approval from the state Agricultural Lands Condemnation Board before erecting high power transmission lines over farmland enrolled in agricultural security areas for farmland preservation purposes.

Beverage Container Deposits — Roadside litter continues to plague farmers, damaging their field equipment, contaminating harvested crops, and in some cases, causing the death of their livestock. PFA is urging passage of H.B. 394 and S.B. 183 to require minimum deposits on beverage containers. PFA also supports S.B. 341 which would allow a public referendum on the issue.

Agricultural Education — As the farm population becomes a smaller and smaller minority, PFA believes it's important that the public, especially future citizens, know where their food comes from and the role agriculture plays in society. PFA is urging prompt passage of H.B. 98 which would establish a state agricultural education program to develop courses and study materials for use by school districts.

Semi-wild Animals — Recent incidents of disease outbreaks in exotic animals held in captivity and deer or elk raised on farms have led to the need to subject these animals to the same health regulations as other farm animals. PFA is urging passage of H.B. 141 and H.B. 142 to give the Department of Agriculture authority to inspect these animals and quarantine or depopulate them if contagious diseases are discovered. Under the bills, the animal owners would be eligible for indemnity payments.

Following the meetings with their legislators, the farmers will hear an address from president Eckel at a banquet at the Harrisburg Hotel starting at 6:30 p.m.

Milk Drinkers Come To The Cow In Westmoreland County

DAVID HIEBERT
Westmoreland Co. Correspondent

KECKSBURG (Westmoreland County) — A family dairy here has milk drinkers coming to them.

Gilbert and Jane Hutter, with their sons' (Dale and Blaine) families run a dairy production and distribution operation that has grown in the last 40 years from a one family farm to a three family business.

The dairy and farm, located between the villages of Norvelt and Kecksburg in rural Westmoreland County, seems to have developed a producers dream situation. Almost everything they produce is either consumed by their herd, or sold to consumers.

In the process of growing food and family, all the children helped milk cows before breakfast. There has been growth, including purchase of land (125 acres in 1973 and 92 acres in 1983).

A major step in the business development, according to Gilbert, came in 1969 when they decided to increase income by adding retailing to their dairy production. Their retail milk store opened in 1969.

Beginning the farm

The farm began in 1950 when Gilbert moved from his parents home in near-by Weltytown. The original farm consisted of a house, barn, 203 acres, and milk shipment of 5 gallons a day.

Gilbert recalls those days before any soil conservation measures had been implemented on the land. After a rain "I don't know why I went back over the hill. Between each of the rows of grain the soil had washed down and started covering the plants below." Seeing that damage to his land motivated Hutter to begin extensive conservation steps.

First came contour farming in 1953. Then three diversion terraces, including grassed waterways to allow runoff without erosion in the middle '60s. Minimum till cultivation began in 1974.

In analyzing the benefits of minimum till, the Hutters point to a variety of advantages in addition to saving the soil. The advantages they see are: reduced labor, better nutrient management, ground water preservation, reduced fuel use and lower equipment investment. Hutters current minimum till cycle includes planting, herbicide application, harvest, disking (sometimes) and manure injection.

With the retailing operation taking time, the reduced labor is significant for the Hutters. "We have kept labor in the family," said Gilbert.

Minimum till fits their nutrient management needs, which became a high priority in 1979.

"We inject the manure," said Blaine. Injection confines the nutrients to the ground, which "cut fertilizer use about half. When you can smell it, all the good stuff is getting away," he said.

The key to planting in the minimum till approach, according to Gilbert, is watching the seed depth. He feels some have planted too deep and then are disappointed in the stand. "You have to keep checking the seed," he said. Different soils and conditions require different planter settings to get the seed covered but not too deep.

Packaging their own milk

In 1969 when they decided to start the retail business, the Hutters built across the road from the house and barn to give physical separation between the herd and the processing and selling operation. Now milk amounts to two-thirds of the store's sales. Between the store and a wholesale route developed by Dale, all the milk from the 140 head (85 milking) herd is sold.

But matching consumer need with production has required a close eye on the freshening cycle of the cows. "If we see a time coming up when a lot will be dry, we try to hurry some heifers into production," said herdsman Blaine. And there has been an arrangement made to buy or sell with other sources, but that has to be minimized because "we have to buy at premium prices and sell at surplus."

In setting up the first processing system, the family worked with dairy supplier Oaks and Burger, Cleveland, Ohio. The connection has been maintained to this day. In addition, the family credits Sid Bernard, an Ag-extension worker from Penn State, with helping them set up their processing system in the beginning. And with maintaining quality. One time, the dairy had trouble with high bacteria, and Sid helped solve the problem by reviewing their whole process. His simple solution: hotter cleaning water.

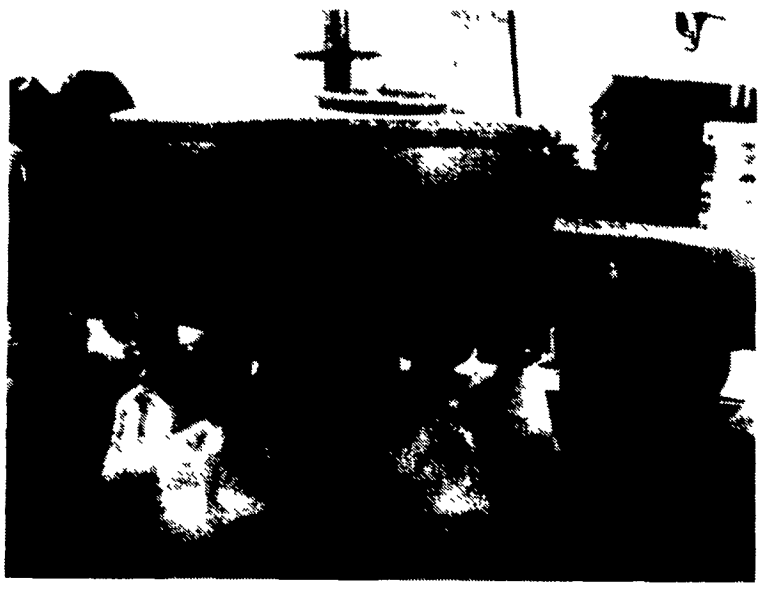
Developing the wholesale part of the milk business has been up to Dale. Current customers include gas stations, dairy queens, and restaurants. But, he said, time for expanding that customer list has been limited. Processing is done three times a week, and then the milk has to be delivered.

The processing begins when the milk is hauled from the barn to be cooled and stored. On processing days, the milk is run from storage through a tri-processor. The skim, 2%, 4%, or chocolate milk is then pasteurized at 140 degrees for 30 minutes in a 200 gallon vat. In a continuous stream, the milk is homogenized under 2,000 pounds per square inch pressure, then cooled to 40 degrees with well water, before bottling.

"If all farmers processed (and sold) their own milk, and heard the complaints, we'd all be producing better milk," said Gilbert. One key he cites is feeding time: to prevent feed taste in the milk, feeding three hours before milking should be restricted. And they emphasize that no feed should be given the hour and half before milking.

In conclusion, the sales side of the dairy seems to have had a positive impact on the production side. And to produce a similar income without the retail outlet, the Hutters would have to double the herd size. In good conservation practices and responding to the times, the family has found a key to survival.

Gilbert Hutter can sometimes be found at the cash register of the retail portion of Hutter Dairy in Westmoreland County.



Carol Gary, a daughter, loads the plastic milk jugs into the bottling machine at Hutter Dairy. This Westmoreland County dairy combines retail and wholesale distribution with production to provide income for three family households. The dairy processes 3-4,000 gallons of milk each week.

FOCUS

Pennsylvania Dairy Herd Improvement Association

Pennsylvania DHIA news is presented in FOCUS each week in cooperation with Dixie L. Harris, manager of membership development.

For more information about these news items or the services of DHIA call 1-800-DHI-TEST. The call is free.

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — The Pennsylvania Dairy Herd Improvement Association is announcing changes in the way its programs will be marketed as a result of the changes made to the Bylaws of National DHIA at the National Convention earlier this month in Reno, NV.

The major effect of the National Bylaws changes, which were approved unanimously by the delegates from across from the country, is the elimination of "protected" territories for members of National DHIA, which are state and regional associations. Member associations of National DHIA are now free to market their services across state lines, thus offering individual dairymen unprecedented freedom in the choice of their DHIA service provider.

Beginning May 1, 1993 dairymen will be able to transfer from one DHIA to another by filing a notice of intent to transfer with the losing and gaining organizations. National DHIA policy now requires the transfer to be completed within. 60 days unless there are clear reasons why transfer should not be allowed, such as outstanding bills or rules violations involved.

National DHIA was clear in stating that this change does not permit county associations to transfer memberships in behalf of individual dairy producers. Only individual producers are given a choice and they must take the initiative on their own to change their service provider.

PENNSYLVANIA DHIA SUPPORTIVE

The Pennsylvania DHIA, like many other members of National DHIA, supports this fundamental change. Not only will it provide individual producers with greater choice, it will likely lead to more cooperation between National DHIA members and more efficient use of DHIA resources in the future.

The association has already been at work seeking ways to link up with other DHIA's to conserve resources and widen its services to appeal to non-members. Discussions with Northeast DHIA and Ohio DHI, Inc. have been held recently and show promise of cooperation that will benefit producers and the organizations that serve them.

In addition, the association has redesigned its services and pricing and continues to streamline its operations for greater cost efficiency without compromising quality of service. Pennsylvania DHIA consistently demonstrates an excellent combination of turn around time (3.5 days) and service prices that are very competitive with other DHI organizations. By breaking apart both the pricing and choice or reports, PA DHIA has given members the ability to determine how much they pay for service and what type of services they wish to use.

AFFECTS ARE BROAD

These changes at the national level will affect nearly everyone in the DHIA system, including cooperating agencies like the USDA and Penn State. Those most affected, however, will be DHIA members and their service providers.

Pennsylvania DHIA will consider providing service to any producer anywhere, regardless of their membership affiliation.

It's also important to realize that what were formerly state and regional members of National DHIA are now affiliates of National DHIA with no territorial restrictions. All affiliates may market their services anywhere they deem appropriate.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

The following may help clarify the changes and their impact.

As a dairy producer I'm a long way from things happening at the national level. So, how could I be affected by all of this? Although it's not guarranteed, you may find several DHIA's bidding for your business, especially if you live in a high cow density area. Chances are this new environment may lead to rather strong competition where the cost of DHIA operations is the lowest. And that's in high density areas.

Can I continue just the way I have been, or do I have to do something different? You don't have to do anything at all if you are satisfied with your service. Pennsylvania DHIA will continue to provide service to you as long as you want it.

What if I want to transfer my membership to another service provider like Northeast DHIA or Ohio DHI, Inc.? You may do so if the service provider is willing to accept you, but you may not announce your transfer intentions before May 1, 1993.

If I transfer to another service provider, who is responsible for my service? You and your new service provider are.

If I change service providers, how much will service cost? That is up to the organization you are moving to. Each DHIA prices its services differently and determining the exact cost can sometimes be tricky. DHIA members would be well advised to check prices thoroughly before transferring to another service provider.

Can my local association tell me where I may or may not get service from? Absolutely not. National DHIA Policy is clear that such decisions are up to individual dairy producers to make, not local associations.

Can my local association or current service provider transfer me to another service provider without my knowledge and permission? No. In fact, no one may transfer you to another service provider even if you agree to it. That authority resides only with you, the individual producer.

Will new service affiliates be permitted to join National DHIA? Not at this time. However, they may be permitted at some time in the future.

What about private testers? Will this change allow them to come into the DHIA system? Private testers, or Independent Service Providers - ISP's as they are now called - may not affiliate directly with National DHIA. However, they may request to be certified by existing DHIA affiliates. If the affiliate agrees to do so, it is responsible for the services provided by the ISP.

Does this mean I could get official records from an ISP? Yes, if the ISP is certified by a National DHIA affiliate.

All this change seems like a confusing mess to me. Will my service actually improve because of all this new freedom of choice? That remains to be seen. DHIA is going through the same growing pains that AI organizations experienced a number of years ago. Competition does hold the promise of improved service. But what that means regarding the cost of service remains to be seen.

What's going to happen to Pennsylvania DHIA as a result of these changes? The association will continue to become more flexible and efficient, as it has been doing for the past decade. Working relationships with cooperating people and organizations will become stronger and more important. And more rapid change in the way service is provided is likely.

VISION FOR THE FUTURE

Many people speculate about DHIA's future. And that's certainly normal in an industry that speculates about the future of the dairy producers that DHIA supports. What will DHIA service look like 10 years from now? How will milk samples be tested and what for? Will Technicians still make farm visits? If so, how often and what for?

Interesting questions for DHIA leaders to grapple with. But just as changes to DHIA business are often not foreseeable, the new developments in information technology we will see before 2,000 AD are also largely unknown. In spite of this fact, some vision is possible.

There will be fewer DHI service organizations as competition accelerates consolidation of existing organizations. There may be a few new entrants into the business, but probably very few because of the low margins in the dairy management information business. There will be more access and easier access to the DHIA databases as more service people find their service can be improved by using DHIA data. And this will likely result in better service to the producers in the industry.

DHIA will become more important, more effective, more concentrated and more appreciated as new services that display the concept of "more is less" are developed and implemented to save producers and allied industry both time and money.

It will be an exciting time for DHIA members and the industry.

Traffic Changes To Improve Farm Show, Ag Dept. Access

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Driving here this summer and fall to the state Farm Show Complex and the state Department of Agriculture building may pose some inconvenience because of scheduled road constructions.

The road work is to eventually improve traffic flow in the regularly heavily congested area that includes Cameron Street, Elmerton Avenue, Wildwood Park Drive, the access road to Harrisburg State Hospital, and HACC Drive.

The road work, which began last week, should continue through mid-August, according to Gregory Penny, spokesman for PennDOT District 8.

In a news release, it was announced that, "Motorists are advised that most of the work on Cameron Street will take place at night, between 6 p.m. and 6 a.m., and should not interfere with daily traffic patterns — especially the morning and evening rush hours.

"Construction work on Elmerton Avenue may involve restricting traffic lanes during the day. Motorists who use these roads should allow additional time in their travel plans to avoid any delays (sic)."

In a telephone interview, Penny also said that, immediately following the completion of work on those streets and intersections, other work is to begin on the Maclay Street railroad bridge, just east of the main office entrance of the Farm Show Complex.

The latter work should be in progress during the fall dairy and livestock shows. However, exhibitors and visitors who travel I81 to the Farm Show Complex should not experience any difficulty with access, and should be among the first to enjoy any traffic flow improvements from I81 onto Cameron, and to the Farm Show Complex.

The work planned by the Pennsylvania Department of Transportation (PennDOT) is unique in that it is being mutually financially supported by all major agencies or institutions that are to benefit from the new traffic flow patterns.

The summer projects are contracted with Adams County Asphalt Company, of Harrisburg, at a cost of $1,693,567. Federal funds are to be used to pay for 75 percent of the project, while various state and local funds are committed to cover the remaining amount.

Those agencies and institutions also contributing to the cost of road rennovations include the Harrisburg Area Community College (HACC), the state Department of Agriculture, the state Department of Public Welfare, the Governor's Office of Administration, and Susquehanna Township.

According to Penny, even though the different agencies of government all receive tax dollars to use, this roadworks project represents one of the most cooperative spending ventures for mutual benefit by state and local agencies.

The project was started several years ago by a group of state agency people (including some who now work in other areas of government) who initiated efforts to seek a solution to the growing traffic problems in the vicinity.

Traffic flow in the area had been a concern for at least a decade.

Traffic is also intermittently heavy year-round because of regularly scheduled professional soccer games, major auto shows, international livestock shows, national dairy shows, sportsman shows, building shows, horse shows, and other annual events.

The traffic situation is also aggravated by the fact that public entrances to the state Farm Show building and the state Department of Agriculture headquarters on are on opposite sides of the same stretch of Cameron Street.

Furthermore, the entrance to the Harrisburg State Hospital is immediately adjacent to the agriculture building parking lot; the entrance to the Harrisburg Area Community College is adjacent to the state Farm Show Complex parking lot, along Wildwood Park Drive; and the state Game Commission and Pennsylvania State Police headquarters are located along Elmerton Avenue, which is really a sister road to Wildwood Park Drive.

Not only do the roadways in this area attract a lot of traffic because of the various agency headquarters, the college, hospital and the large public events complex, but other local traffic patterns add to the problem.

Commuting Harrisburg city workers and others traveling through the capitol city use Cameron Street during the morning and evening rush hours as access to and from I81, Routes 322 and 11-15, and Front Street.

And, for the past several years, there has been an ongoing dispute between local municipal officials and the state over requests for traffic control during rush hour.

The heart of that controversy has been over which government should be responsible for paying for the police force necessary to control city traffic on state roads, etc.

For years, city police would direct traffic at the exit of the state agriculture building parking lot, so that workers could safely go home during the evening rush.

The need for regular local police to control traffic should be almost eliminated by the changes.

The plans include the creation of a new intersection with a traffic light and extra turning lanes between the agriculture building and the Farm Show building; the widening, addition of lanes, and upgrading of control lights at the Wildwood-Elmerton and Cameron Street intersection; and the widening and addition of lanes at the Cameron Street and Maclay Street intersection.

As Cameron Street currently exists, it is a two-way, four-lane highway with no turning-only lane. Turning into the Farm Show parking lot from the northbound lane of Cameron Street currently requires tying up the left lane, which restricts through traffic to a single lane.

The intersection in front of the agriculture building is to be created by rerouting the Harrisburg State Hospital Road through the ag building's parking lot to a point opposite the main public entrance-exit for the Farm Show Complex. A limited amount of agriculture department parking space is to be lost.

At the proposed intersection, north-travelling traffic on Cameron Street will have one left-turn-only lane into the Farm Show parking area, and two other lanes for ongoing or right-turning traffic.

South-bound Cameron Street traffic will have a right lane yielding turn into the Farm Show parking lot, two through-traffic lanes, and one left-turn-only lane.

Also, the new traffic-light intersection is to have pedestrian crosswalks.

As it is now, pedestrian traffic across Cameron Street between the Farm Show and the ag building is officially restricted to an underpass walkway, which is to remain.

At the north end of the Farm Show parking lot, the changes are to provide dual, left-turn lanes on southbound Cameron Street for access to eastbound Elmerton Avenue, and dual left-turning lanes on northbound Cameron for access to westbound Wildwood Park Drive.

Elmerton Avenue, along which are the Game Commission and State Police headquarters, is to be widened to provide three lanes the full distance from Cameron Street to Crooked Hill Road. The three lanes will consist of two eastbound and one westbound lane.

Westbound Wildwood Park Drive is to be widened to two right-turning lanes into HACC Drive.

Northbound HACC Drive is to be widened to two lanes for its length to the driveway entrance of the Pennsylvania State Employees Credit Union building.

Officials warn that Elmerton Avenue may be restricted to one lane during the day.

No daytime restrictions are anticipated for through-traffic on Cameron Street. After 6 p.m. and prior to 6 a.m., however, it may be restricted to one lane.

Phila Rep Wants More Benefits For Farmworkers

tion, which would drastically change the scope of benefits afforded seasonal farm workers, irrespective of citizenship or legal residence.

Although the Pennsylvania mushroom industry, located heavily in southeastern Pennsylvania, was cited as being among the types of industries targeted by supporters, the implications of the total package are yet to be completely analyzed objectively.

In part, the package would eliminate distinctions between types of farm labor, with respect to longevity of employment; provide minimum wage protection, except for those living close to and working for small farms; extend child labor law protections to the children of farmworkers; allow farmworkers the right to organize and collectively bargain; and provide protections under the Pennsylvania Human Relations Act, which would stipulate certain living conditions at farm labor camps; charge the state Human Relations Commission with the duty to investigate and rule on discrimination complaints by farmworkers; mandate that migrant farmworkers be guaranteed wages paid for three-quarters of the money they would have made, if they arrive at a farm and the expected crop can not be harvested; provide guaranteed wages if employment is terminated, unless fired for good cause (reasons must be written down and records kept for three years); mandate that farm owners would be responsible for paying all payroll taxes and deductions for migrant workers; pay overtime on the same basis as covered under the Minimum Wage Act; provide minimum wages; and keep and maintain a number of records on the workers for three years; and a number of other changes which make it the responsibility of the farm owner, and in some cases, the employer to make sure that benefits and records are kept on each worker; extend the scope and authority of the existing Farm Labor Committee; and mandate that data be collected on the injuries and illnesses of farmworkers living in farm labor camps.

Though no farmworkers issued support for these changes to the law, there are several organizations which have expressed support for Cohen's proposal.

Those organizations include the Pennsylvania Council of Churches, Harrisburg, the Pennsylvania Catholic Council, the New Jersey-based Comite De Aproyo a los Trabajadores Agricolas/ Farmworkers Support Committee, the Pennsylvania AFL-CIO, the Harrisburg Area NAACP, and the Association of Mexico.

The involvement of the church groups centers on their religious programs for migrant or seasonal farm workers, according to Cohen's assistant Cassidy.

According to Cassidy, Cohen has, in the past, been involved on committees that looked into labor issues, including some farmworkers. Cassidy said there are some day haulers who live within Cohen's 202nd District, though they have not formed any representative group on their own.

No farmworkers spoke on behalf of the proposed legislation.

To date, the main opposition has been the Pennsylvania Farmers' Association. According to PFA President Keith Eckel, Cohen's legislation is misdirected, dangerous for Pennsylvania agriculture, and redundant.

Although it would seem to have an effect, no one has yet addressed the possible conflicts these changes may have with ongoing NAFTA negotiations. Creating higher standards for labor compensation could possibly create problems with ongoing side negotiations with Mexico over labor and environmental issues as they pertain to establishing a first-ever North American Free Trade Agreement.

Labor issues are being negotiated with NAFTA because of concerns that Mexico's low worker protection and wages would allow agricultural businesses to move there and compete unfairly with local farm labor jobs, and further destroy the existing state tax base, since overhead costs of production in Mexico would be substantially lower.

In his remarks, Cohen said of his proposal, "The basis for the amendments which I am proposing today, is to bring farm workers closer to first-class citizenship, enjoying the same protections of law as other citizens."

In his opposition, Eickel said, "Based on what Rep. Cohen said at his news conference, the three proposed bills demonstrated a lack of understanding of farming and the migrant labor situation in Pennsylvania. Ninety-nine percent of everything they asked for migrant workers is already covered by state or federal law.

"What they are really seeking is to cover all farm employees under the State Labor Relations Act and other laws designated to protect migrant labor. If successful, it could be a disaster for agriculture."

Snyder Establishes Award

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — J. Roy Snyder recently committed $10,000 to benefit students in the College of Agricultural Sciences at Penn State.

Snyder, who received an associate degree in agricultural business at Penn State in 1916, created this award in honor of his son, grandson, and granddaughter-in-law, all of whom graduated from Penn State.

Establishes Ag Scholarship

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Henry F. Pierce, II, a 1943 Penn State graduate, has committed $25,000 to Penn State to establish the Henry F. Pierce, II, Scholarship in Agricultural Sciences.

The scholarship will provide recognition and financial assistance to undergraduate students enrolled in the College of Agricultural Sciences who have shown marked academic improvement during their third or fourth semesters.

The college's scholarship committee, along with recommendations of academic advisers for the College of Agricultural Sciences, will select a number of recipients each year and determine the amount awarded to each. Students who remain eligible may receive the scholarship more than once.

Officials Say Pennsylvania DHIA Set For The Future

Ohio to try to find ways to work cooperatively to improve services and share resources. He said the directors had spent time in many meetings over the state in the past year to try to help local units decide if they wanted to merge or remain independent.

"It's been a busy year, and the board had a lot of challenges," Orner said. "I think the board met those challenges. One of the most obvious changes in the system was our efforts to respond quickly to members. The introduction of new reports and the introduction of the laser printer came from the input from farmers on what they like or don't like.

"I ask you to go back to your counties and give a positive report about the state association," Orner said. "We learn from the problems of the past and focus on the future."

In the treasurer's report, Norm Hershey said that in spite of everything, the association managed to come out with a pretty good year. He reported total revenues of just over $5 million, total assets of nearly $2 million and excess of revenue over expenses of $50,000.

Dick Barth, general manager, said that because state DHIA's no longer have their protected territories, the way DHIA operates will change more than from anything else that has occurred in its history. "Some people like to say this will not make much change operationally, but I disagree with that view. I think there will be tremendous change."

Barth called the change in direction "paradigm shifts." He said these changes started to occur on the state level at the annual meeting last year in Hershey when Lancaster County said they wanted to have the opportunity to be more in control of their own program at the local level.

"What Lancaster said and did was part of the motivation to change at the national level and opening the system up," Barth said. "It was a model change within the way we do things here in Pennsylvania because the environment in DHIA and in the dairy industry is in an environment of change.

"Every day something changes. Our programs change on a daily basis. When a dairy farmer says something has changed on his farm and he needs something different from DHIA, we change what we are doing to accommodate those needs. The paradigm shift that has occurred is one that has gone from a relatively static environment as far as member services and programs go, to one that has continual change. That change doesn't happen without cost and education expense or loss of personnel to the system because they don't want to deal with these changes. That doesn't make it bad, in my view. For you it makes better service."

Barth said that out of these changes, new Integrated Management Systems for the Dairy Industry (INFINITY) programs had been developed. These programs first introduced nationally at the National Convention in Reno are designed to market Pennsylvania's services across state lines to other associations, and other individual dairymen in other states.

"That's what the new role of a DHIA service provider is," Barth said. INFINITY is a repackaging of our services with a brand name that is not specific to geography. It doesn't convey that this is just for Pennsylvania. It conveys that this is an organization operating across lines for many people's benefit. INFINITY is the way things will go in the future: more service, more choice, more flexibility, more variety."

"In spite of the difficulties of the past year, your volunteer leaders on the board of directors and your staff have worked hard to make this organization better. The morale is high. The staff regards the change in the national by-laws as an opportunity, not a porblem.

"I think this organization is prepared to compete, and I think we will do a good job of it. I hope your morale is high. I think it should be. We learned some valuable lessons last year that will serve us into the future.

"You folks are great. I love working for you; I love this organization. I love you. If we can all commit to work together, everything will be fantastic in Pennsylvania DHIA. I wish you well in the next year. I certainly hope this organization is as successful as we all want it to be," Barth concluded.

George Cudoc, chairman of the DRCP committee, said with the new direction of DHIA the organization is now not limited by boundaries, but it must have direction. He said the committee has three main goals: Pennsylvnaia processing and records systems you use must be state of the art; they must be cost effective that all dairy farmers can afford and they must be in compliance with quality certification.

"The important task for the DRCP advisory committee is to lend direction to the state board on what dairy farmers need, to provide accurate, useful information on the farm," Cudoc said. "The committee is a vehicle by which dairy farmers in Pennsylvania can express ideas, wants, and needs and have a way to present this to the state board. The committee will receive all suggestions as to needed programs and changes in current programs for Pennsylvania DHIA.

Accomplishment during the first year that came from the committee were listed to include: the new cow page and the new herd summary. Additional management information has been included in the reports and the laser format makes them easier to read.

SNF testing was started, Dairy Comp 305 is now in use in 35 different circuits that have the laptop computers, and services were unbundled to give dairy farmers a freedom of choice on reports.

"We hope to instill in people the confidence to allow this committee and the board the time to react to requests," Cudoc said.

In a moving tribute to the late Clyde S. Robinson, who served 30 years with local, state, and national DHIA boards, Vice President Bill Jackson announced the formation of the Leadership Award in Robinson's name to be presented at the association's annual meetings. The recipient will be selected by the board of directors and must be a DHIA dairy producer that has provided unselfish leadership for the dairy industry and promoted the welfare of the association and its members. Clyde's wife, Marie Robinson, and other members of his family were present to receive the honor.

Atlantic Breeders Report Good Year To Members

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.)—Members at the Atlantic Breeders Cooperative annual meeting Wednesday were told that the organization had total revenues of over $9 million in 1992, current assests of $6,011,402, and a profit called total savings and income, of $396,343. In the financial report, David Mellinger said that the strong commitment Atlantic has made to future planning and with "our rock hard financial position," the cooperative will "be there tomorrow."

"Our current year was a good one," said Harry Roth, general manager. "We had our eighth year of increases in member unit sales volume and had a very positive year in profit. Our service volume has grown 11 percent the last five years, while direct-herd sales have increased 8 percent. This growth happened during a time when total cow numbers declined rapidly. In 1993 we implemented the first service fee increase since the late 1980's. The increase was small and not as great as the rate of increased cost of service.

"The cash position is very strong and your board is continuing to be certain that the Revolving Fund Certificates are retired in order to keep equity as current as possible. Careful control is constantly practiced to stay within the expense budget. In all likelihood, this year and next year will tell us that we might need to be even more frugal in expenses in order to maintain a good level of cash in the operation, and to keep a reasonable profit level.

Dr. Robert Kenney was honored for work with the A.I. industry at Atlantic Breeders' annual meeting. From left are, Harry Roth, general manager, Kenney, and James Kreider, president.

"I feel confident that the leadership of your cooperative will be more than capable of dealing with the challenges ahead. I appreciate their foresight, their ability to assess the performance of your cooperative and to make policy decisions accordingly."

President Jim Kreider said 1992 was a good year for farmers because they had a good supply of feed that allowed for good production and income. But he said milk companies and economists are predicting a five to eight percent drop in milk prices for 1993. And he said continued pressures would come on the farmer from real estate reassessment, animal rights people, and increasing overhead while income is decreasing.

Kreider said we must plan to operate under these conditions and listed six values that the cooperative embraced--people, performance, diversity, team work, communications, and integrity.

"We are looking for a good year in 1993," Kreider said, "but we will need the cooperation of everyone. And we will need to set goals. If you don't care where you are going, any road will lead you there. Atlantic does care and believes its members deserve the best."

Each year an award is given for exceptional contributions to the AI industry. Dr. Robert M. Kenney, University of Pennsylvania, New Bolton Center, was honored for his work that extends back to the early '60's when he provided expertise in treating bulls with reproductive difficulties while he was on the staff at New York State College and Cornell Vet. College.

Kenney also fostered classroom training for students in the practical values of AI in the economics of agriculture and his keen appetite for research and technology development led him in to being a pioneer in embryo transfer work at New Bolton.

In the election that followed the meeting, all officers were reelected. James Kreider, president; Dave Hileman, vice president; Dwight Hawbaker, secretary and Lee Kummer, treasurer.

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

EPHRATA (Lancaster Co.) — One key ingredient to help ensure milk quality and keep residues out of the tank is to establish a good veterinarian relationship. In the long run, producers can protect themselves from problems in the future, and prevent outcries from haulers, processors, and consumers.

To help producers ensure milk and dairy beef quality, a special Quality Assurance Program was recently begun. Established by a committee made up of members of the American Veterinary Medical Association and the National Milk Producers Federation, the program helps dairy farmers manage the procedures involved in the use and application of drugs through a special Ten Critical Control Point Program.

All 58 pages of the 10-point program were scrutinized on Tuesday night at Ephrata High School during a special meeting of the Ephrata Area Young Farmers Association with the help of Dr. Walter K. Trumbaurer, a local veterinarian.

Trumbaurer said that he knew of two instances where drug residues were found in the tank, and what happened.

Both were caused by "departures from the normal routine," he said.

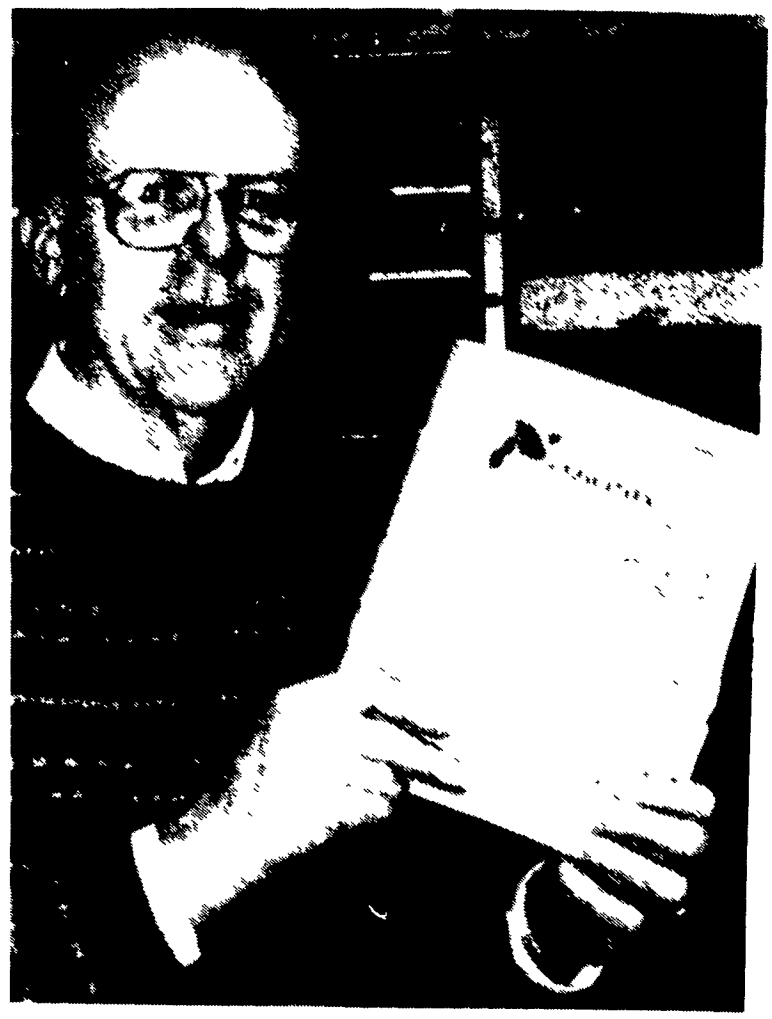
"I think you all have your routine for the treated animal," he told the 30 producers present. "You either milk her last or use a cheater pale or separate pale. When you break the routine, that's when it happens."

In one case, a producer placed a dry-tested cow on antibiotics with the milking cows, and the milker was put on by accident.

In the other, a known, tested cow was accidentally placed in with milking cows. The milker was put on. The milk was going through the pipeline, and the workers decided to unhook the pipes nearest the tank, hoping to stop the flow of the tainted milk. It didn't work.

In both cases, the producers should have tested the tanks to determine if there were antiobiotics present, using several commercially available testers.

One farmer at the meeting admitted they were pushed to get the milking done on time, and the cheater pale was pushed aside and the milker accidentally put on. The tank was contaminated. "I find the hurrier I go, the behinder I get," he told the other farmers.



All 58 pages of the 10-point program were scrutinized on Tuesday night at Ephrata High School during a special meeting of the Ephrata Area Young Farmers Association with the help of Dr. Walter K. Trumbaurer, a local veterinarian.

In most cases of residue problems in milk, Trumbaurer said it is only a perceived problem in the mind of the public, not a real problem.

"Consumers have been increasingly concerned about what they eat, and the news media has been printing reports that the food they eat is tainted with drug residues," Trumbaurer read from a statement about the 10-point program. He commented, "There are very, very few instances in human medicine where reactions have occured to residues of drugs in milk and meat. There are some, but they're very few."

Many times, according to the report, residues end up in the milk for the following reasons: poor treatment records, treated animals not identified, recommended withdrawal times not followed, drugs used in an extra-label manner, and lack of veterinarian advice, especially when using extra-label drugs.

What the program is all about, according to Trumbaurer, is maintaining the public's confidence in the food supply.

"The public is frightened and the press overemphasizes it," he said. "Every time you hear about a residue or something bad in the food supply, the farmers get bad press."

By following the 10-point program, producers can stop the bad press and protect themselves from liability.

The 10 points are:

1) Practice healthy herd management. Investments in disease prevention are more cost effective than treatment, and include proper milking management, good hoof care and trimming, calving cows in a sanitary environment, and proper vaccination. Preventive herd health management practices are critical for profitable milk production and growth, improved animal health, decreased costs and milk discard, efficient drug use, and reduced potential for milk and meat residues. "The idea here is to do things that help minimize treatment," said Trumbaurer. The less producers rely on drugs, the less likely they will have to worry about drug residues.

2) Establish a valid veterinarian/patient relationship. The veterinarian should know you and your cows well enough to be able to prescribe the best treatment. If you're going to use a drug extra-label or prescription drug, said Trumbaurer, legally you can't do that unlesss you have a valid vet/client relationship. The vet is responsible for regulating the health of a a herd, has to have sufficient knowledge of the herd, and must be able to continue follow-up health management. If using drugs in extra-label manner, according to the veterinarian, the use is not technically legal — it's not sanctioned by the FDA, except when the immediate survival of the animal is at stake. But it often puts much of the onus, he said, on the vet.

3) Use only FDA-approved over-the-counter (OTC) or prescription drugs with veterinarian's guidance. OTC drugs are those that producers can buy at the store, take home, and use on the cattle, and are labeled such. Prescription drugs are those with a caution label that are only to be administered by a licensed veterinarian. According to Trumbaurer, "extra-label" means using the drug for a condition or reason not described on the label, a dosage form not on the label, or administering the drug by a different route. One "extra-label" use of a drug is using aspirin on lactating cattle. "There are people who are allergic to aspirin," he said. "If you give a cow aspirin, it may say on the label what the dosage is for cattle and horses. It doesn't say anything about lactating cattle and extra-label use."

4) Make sure all drugs you use have labels that comply with state and/or federal labeling requirements. OTC drugs must have name of the drug, active ingredients, directions for use, withholding/withdrawal times, and name of manufacturer or distributor on the label. Prescription drugs must have the same, but also the name and address of the dispensing veterinarion and the caution statements.

5) Store all drugs correctly. On the certification, producers can get docked if the drugs aren't stored correctly. "You know what you're going to use it for, but the milk inspector doesn't," said Trumbaurer. Non-lactating and lactating drugs must have separate shelves. Exceptions are topical drugs. Also, keep in mind that some drugs are perishable, and must be refrigerated. Producers who store drugs in the house and away from the herd proves "to the milk inspector that you're hiding something," he said. "It's proving to me that you're using drugs you don't know how to use and that's why you're hiding them."

6) Administer all drugs properly and identify all treated animals. The important point, according to Trumbaurer, is to make sure the treated animals are labeled, using either leg bands or paint sticks.

7) Maintain and use proper treatment records on all treated animals. This point is "the most difficult," said Trumbaurer, because it emphasizes keeping written records, which some farmers find hard to do. Records must be kept to show treatment dates and times, diagnosis, dosage, route of administration, person who administered the drug, withdrawal times for milk (hours) and meat (days), and residue test information, including test used, day, time, and results.

Six Reasons To Feel Positive

4. Farmers don't like pesticide misuse any more than consumers do. Most people who sell and use pesticides do so carefully and according to the law. But, as the saying goes, "it only takes a few rotten apples to spoil the barrel." According to the poll, less than half of all U.S. farmers believe that any pesticides are knowingly misapplied. Even so, two-thirds favor stronger enforcement of penalties for misapplication. And two out of five farmers favor mandatory education and certification for anyone who applies pesticides as the best solution for preventing misapplication.

Farmers are not saying they want more laws, but they do support getting tougher on that small percentage of people who don't respect existing laws ... and consequently put the reputation and credibility of agriculture at risk.

5. Farmers have confidence in the regulatory system. At least 80% of all farmers believe current safeguards are sufficient to protect consumers, farm workers and the environment. But even more (85%) are convinced that the general public doesn't understand these safeguards.

6. Farmers are pitching in to help educate the non-farm public. According to the poll, 80% of the farmers believe that consumers are more concerned about farm environmental issues today than five years ago, and that food safety is their greatest concern. They also believe that consumers are not very well informed about environmental issues associated with agriculture, including regulatory safeguards.

At the same time, 68% of farmers believe that education can reduce public concerns; and they believe farmers themselves should play an important role in that education, as should government. Most importantly, 36% of farmers say they have personally participated in efforts to educate their non-farm neighbors, usually as part of an effort by an organized farm group.

It's clear from the poll that farmers share the public's concern for the environment and are making positive changes on their farms. But it's also clear — and we don't need a poll to tell us this — that the job of balancing agricultural productivity with environmental sensitivity is never really finished. There's always more work to be done.

Environmental issues are not likely to go away. Some experts predicted that environmental issues would decrease in importance as our nation's economic issues became more serious. But issues like water quality have proven to have incredible staying power, and it's now clear that environmentalism will simply be a part of doing business in the years ahead.

Fortunately, we have a solid foundation on which to build. If we, as an industry, keep sharpening our understanding of these complex issues, keep embracing positive changes, and keep talking with our non-farm neighbors, we'll have even more good news to talk about in the future.

Farm Employers Learn How To Attract, Keep Workers

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

INTERCOURSE (Lancaster Co.) — An almost ideal classroom setting would include a respected, charismatic teacher with a solid grasp of the subject, and a class of several eager, willing students.

While that may be the epitomy and the rare reality for those within the traditional educational system, it is not the norm for the many seminars coordinated and offered to those in agriculture.

Normal agricultural seminars are a series of speakers with handouts and slide shows or overhead projector transparencies.

However, on Wednesday, Dr. Bernie Erven, professor and Extension specialist in labor management at Ohio State University, used about every classroom teaching trick in the book and a few others to evoke participation in discussions, and to pass along techniques and tools for hiring farm labor.

Erven, who grew up on an Ohio farm, has degrees from Ohio State and University of Wisconsin and just recently returned from a year at Cornell University, N.Y., where he worked with several national leaders in farm and personnel management.

Twenty-one people attended the Intercourse $30-per-person, $50-per-couple event, held at Harvest Drive Restaurant, on Wednesday. A repeat of the class was held Thursday at the Allentown Days Inn.

The seminars were sponsored by the Penn State University Extension offices of Chester and Northampton counties, and included a noon meal. The seminar went from 9 a.m. to a little past 4 p.m.

Specifically, Erven covered finding, recruiting, training and keeping farm employees.

While he followed a certain format, the professor said that he tries to stay flexible in his presentations to the needs of the group. He said the dialogue and participation was above his expectations.

The program was the first one of its kind offered by extension in the area, and will likely return, according to Alan Strock, multi-county extension agent. However, Strock said that the program will likely be picked up under the Dairy MAP program, which is a coming series of intensive educational offerings designed to aid successful operation of a dairy farm.

According to Erven, management is nothing more than the art of creative problem solving.

In order to be a better and more efficient manager, it helps to be exposed to a number of different tools used successfully by others according to certain scenarios.

The key of the information offered from Erven seemed to be that a personal desire for honesty and a constant re-evaluation of perspective, facts and priorities, can help establish a working environment desirable and mutually beneficial to the employer and employee.

The lessons offered by Erven were numerous. Those who participated said they felt the seminar was worth the cost.

His teaching technique seemed to be to hint at the what he was trying to convey, through partial, sensationalized statements, or through ancedote and actual or reported occurances.

The participants then offered summaries of what he was saying. He would stay on a topic until it was clear that the concept was grasped and that the "students" had vocalized an understanding of the material.

The group was set up in a semicircle around Erven, who manned his overhead projector and frequently used a portable blackboard, but spent most of the time traveling the room, maintaining eye and verbal contact, offering participants equal access to himself.

He also relied on humor to create a sense of ease.

Among some of his offerings, he warned the group about seeking identical-quality people for all jobs on the farm. The point was to build a force with multiple talents, viewpoints, and personal goals.

The reason was so that the work force not only gets along better because worker infighting from direct competition is lessened, but because of the greater depth of experience and skills which can be brought to use.

"Every dairy farm should have somebody who doesn't like cows," he said.

He said that the employer has to be honest with self-analysis and figure out who they are and what they want out of life and their business, before starting to decide what they want others to do.

He told the group they must "Know yourself. Know your farm. Know your strengths and weaknesses."

One of the class participation activities included breaking the group into four groups — two groups were to write down the advantages of working at a farm, the other two groups were to list the disadvantages.

After a 10-minute period, the group got back together and, using a blackboard and chalk, Erven wrote down the reasons.

He and the participants reviewed each of the reasons listed.

For each advantage, they talked about validity of them as selling points for a job. For each disadvantage, they talked about ways to minimize the disadvantage or eliminate it.

On the list of advantages were working with living things; diversity of job; outdoor working; flexibility in hours; job satisfaction in creating a needed product; no traffic problems to get to work; work with family; and recreational perks, such as hunting and fishing.

The disadvantages were working in miserable weather; long hours and low pay; dangerous; no vacations; little chance of advancement; fewer benefits than non-farm jobs; the work is never finished; jobs are undefined; and their is low prestige.

Of course, other considerations for both points of view were given, but Erven limited the issues to those which could be listed and dealt with in a reasonable time.

The conclusion reached was that there are "Some very important pluses in farm work," Erven said.

The disadvantages, he said, could be addressed through management — creative problem solving.

For miserable weather, the solutions provided by Erven and the group was to provide adequate protective clothing for workers, which would include rain gear, boots, etc., and to also consider modifying equipment to provide for worker comfort.

Erven said that many studies and farmer seminars deal with animal comforts and improving their environmental working conditions to get more efficient results.

He said that same concern should also be address toward the worker.

The issue of long hours and low pay is one by which the farm employer knows he is getting free work beyond a reasonable number of hours.

According to Erven, a study showed that farmworkers working beyond 40 hours a week were being paid $1.60 for each additional hour.

At 60 to 80 hours per week, a worker will get tired. Tired people make mistakes and take shortcuts. Erven said that employers have to look at the potential losses which can be felt to a business when asking workers to put in long hours for low pay.

On the other hand, Erven told the group, "Good labor management is not an excuse for poor business management." His point being that there is a lot of work to be done in setting up an organized, functional farming operation, and labor management is but one consideration.

Erven said that the reasons given most often by an employer for an employee leaving a job is compensation. However, Erven said that employees reveal that compensation is far down the list in what keeps them on a job.

While not suggesting that pay is unimportant, Erven said it's not everything — employers have to realize they can and do offer more than compensation for work performed.

"Employers tend to overestimate pay and underestimate job satisfaction."

He also told the group they must treat their workers as individuals, as people. He said there is no formula for success in estalishing a good relationship.

He said that rewards and incentives — expected or unexpected — should be in place for good performance. He said that if a worker is doing a good job, instead of giving that worker money (depending on the worker), there are other creative ways to reward that person that shows that you understand what that person likes. It does two things; it helps create a loyalty and it doesn't have to be as expensive, or more expensive than a cash bonus.

Another guideline Erven offered is that small businesses should be regularly losing their best employees and their worst employees.

Although purposefully losing a good worker may not seem like a good move, it is important to recognize when a worker is overqualified or has worked up to a position where there is no longer any room for advancement.

Erven said in these cases, it may be best to talk to the worker, suggest trying to help him secure a better job, tell him that the business can't afford to pay him what he is worth.

The key to it is, the farm gets the benefit of having a good worker who is moving up. If the employer tried to keep a good worker without eventually recognizing an inability to compensate that worker for skills developed, etc., that farm may never see another informed good worker again, because eventually the reputation will get out that there is a poor employer running things.

Getting rid of the worst workers is also a necessity, but how the employer handles the dismissal of that worker is also very important. Erven suggested taking the tact that it's obvious the job isn't suited for him, and to try to leave the former worker with opinion that he left a place that was good for the right person.

Erven said the goal would be for the former worker to tell his friends, "It wasn't for me, but you'd probably do pretty well."

As far as the safety aspect, that also can be minimized through education, adopting a safety attitude, and through regular maintenance of equipment and maintaining safety features.

The undefined job is really the failure of the employer to properly analyze himself, his farm and weaknessess and strengths.

Erven said, "I know. You hired the man to do the milking and anything else you want him to do, when you want him to do, and at anytime. That's why he gets use of the house."

The participants' laughter at Erven's sarcasm, however didn't last as he addressed the low prestige associated with some farm work, and went back to address the lack of farm job definitions.

For low prestige, there are many things which can be done to improve that. Mostly, however, is the attitude of the employer. If he does not consider it to be a prestigious job, the worker won't either.

Moreover, community interaction goes a long way to establishing prestige.

He said that a survey done among the American people of what they thought was the most prestigious job in U.S. society showed the most common answer was supreme court justice.

Erven then discussed all the negatives associated with being a supreme court justice.

"For every single job, you can make an impressive list (for disadvantages)," he said.

Once all the job descriptions are done — "Be specific. Milking is not a job description; it's the name of some work." — the best way to procede is to try to create as large a pool of applicants for the job as is possible.

Erven said that he presents this formula: get the largest number of applicants (Don't make the applications too specific or irrelevant. He said he likes one-page applications which give the basics — name, education and experience.); select from the applicants those who should be interviewed; do the interviews and make a selection.

While he offered some insight into each aspect of the hiring formula, he did say that the best way to build up a good pool of applicants is to advertise. He said the best way to do that is to use want ad sections of newspapers.

Using word of mouth advertising for a job, or relying on close references, limits the number of applicants and puts the farm employer at a loss of control in getting the best workers he can.

He also suggested training someone with desire but little experience, as opposed to someone with lots of experience, but also attitude.

Although there was much more offered during the seminar, Erven said that it was key that the participants changed their operations slowly. He suggested five years.

Board Forms To Help Clean Up Scrapie

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — A nine-member scrapie flock certification board has been formed and will meet for the second time here on Tuesday.

The committee has begun plans to form a program to begin, on a statewide level, the national voluntary scrapie flock certification program enacted in October of last year. The intent of the program, according to board member Dr. Ulysses J. Lane, area veterinarian in charge, state veterinary services (VS), is to give recognition to sheep flocks that are free of the disease and provide technical assitance to infected flocks, he wrote in a letter to producers and other agencies on March 12.

The letter was sent to producers of flocks known to have had sheep infected with scrapie or blood line connections to known infected animals. Lane told Lancaster Farming that a subcommittee is working to disseminate information about the program to newspapers and other media.

"What we're trying to do is to develop a system to identify and evaluate scrapie and scrapie-free flocks," he said. Lane said he hopes more producers can become involved in the program to help certify their flocks are scrapie-free and to take management steps necessary to ensure they remain so.

The Tuesday meeting will lay down important steps to help organize schedules and plans to notify producers and to distribute information regarding scrapie, through extension offices and other means.

Until recently, according to the March 12 letter, scrapie was regarded as a minor disease of sheep and goats. It is a fatal, degenerative disease affecting the central nervous system of sheep and goats. What causes scrapie is still unknown — the agent, according to an Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service (APHIS) Fact Sheet, is smaller than the smallest known virus and has not been identified. However, a gene that controls the length of incubation of clinical scrapie has been identified in one breed of sheep.

According to the fact sheet, scrapie signs vary widely among individual animals and develop very slowly. Early signs include subtle changes in behavior or temperament, which may be followed by scratching and rubbing against fixed objects, apparently to relieve itching. Other signs are loss of coordination, weight loss despite retention of appetite, biting of feet and limbs, lip smacking, and gait abnormalities — including high-stepping of the forelegs, bunny hop movement of rear legs, and swaying of back end.

An infected animal may appear normal if left undisturbed at rest. When stimulated by a sudden noise, excessive movement, or the stress of handling, the animal may tremble or fall down in a convulsive-like state.

The disease can be transmitted to other animals, and some diseases related to scrapie can infect other species. In the laboratory, scrapie has been transmitted to hamsters, mice, rats, gerbils, mink, and some species of monkeys. Of particular concern, particularly to Lane, is bovine spongiform encephalopathy (BSE), caused by a scrapie-like agent, which affects cattle.

According to the letter, evidence suggests that a BSE outbreak in Great Britain may have resulted from including rendered scrapie-infected sheep carcasses into bovine rations. "Scrapie has become a disease of economic impact," according to Lane. Although BSE is not known to exist in the U.S., meat packers and renderers have taken steps to divert the use of sheep offal in ruminant rations.

The letter estimated that the effects of this "have cost producers an average of $5 per head."

Members of the Pennsylvania certification board are John Conaway, Pennsylvania Suffolk Sheep Association; Dr. Tom Drake, Pennsylvania State University Extension and Pennsylvania Veterinary Medical Association; Ronald Miller, Pennsylvania Sheep and Wool Growers Association; June Reed, flock owner; Dr. C.S. Card, Pennsylvania Animal Health and Diagnostic Commisssion; Dr. Maher Rizk, USDA, APHIS, VS, and scrapie program coordinator; Ronald Trostle, Pennsylvania Livestock Association; Dr. Max Van Buskirk, Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture; and Dr. Ulysses J. Lane, USDA, APHIS, and VS.

For more information about the program, or to obtain fact sheets about scrapie, contact Dr. Ulysses J. Lane at APHIS, 2301 N. Cameron St., Room 412, Harrisburg, PA 17110, (717) 782-3442.

On the farm is a 200 sow farrow to finish facility. The Wingerts also feed 170 brood cows, finishing all the calves. Eugene has been a member/patron of CV since 1952. Eugene helped organize the Pennsylvania Pork Council and served as its first president. He has also served on the executive committee of the National Pork Producers' Council, and served on the board of the Pennsylvania Farmers' Association.

Lester E. Martin — 3926 Guilford Springs Road, Chambersburg. The Martin farming operation consists of a 200-head purebred Jersey milking herd with another 200 dry cows and heifers. Cropping acreage is about 800 acres. Lester's son Doug, is a partner in the operation. Lester is currently a Director of CV Co-op and is Chairman of the Branch/Customer Relations Committee and 1st Vice-President of the Board. Lester was recently elected Chairman of the York Farm Credit ACA Board of Directors.

Herman Wirth — 7587 Rowe Run Road, Chambersburg. The Wirth farming operation includes an 18-head Sow/Farrow-to-Finish operation. Herman is a graduate of Rutgers University College of Agriculture, and is retired from the U.S. Army with 27 years service. He is a member and past Secretary of the Franklin County Farmers Association, has served on the Advisory Committee of Adams Electric Cooperative, and is a member and past Chairman of his church's parish council. He currently serves on the Executive Committee of C.V. Co-op as Secretary.

SHIPPENSBURG AREA

NEWVILE AREA

Robert Jamison — 2249 Newville Road, Carlisle. Robert has been farming for 40 years, moving to Carlisle in 1974 from Bucks County. He and his wife Janet farm 70 acres, growing corn, oats, wheat, soybeans, and alfalfa to feed a herd of 25 milk cows and 15 heifers. Robert is currently Treasurer of the Cumberland County Farmers' Association.

Carl Kelso, Jr. — 550 Ridge Road, Shippensburg. Carl and son Woody own and rent about 400 acres, raising corn and alfalfa for their 60 milk cows and 60 heifers. Carl has been a member of the Co-op for about 40 years. Carl is also a member of the Pennsylvania Farmers' Association.

In the business meeting, the association reported $6,841,842 sales with $1,689,582 gross margins and $214,200 net margins.

Heidi Negley, Cumberland County Dairy Princess, brought greetings from the Promotion Program and Wayne Craig, presided at the meeting.

Honors Century Farms

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Eighteen Pennsylvania farm families have been honored by the State Department of Agriculture as official Pennsylvania Century Farms. This brings to 1,622 the number of farm owners in Pennsylvania who have been recognized under the program.

"Our century farm families demonstrate a durability and love of the land that is the heritage of Pennsylvania," said Secretary of Agriculture Body E. Wolff. "Agriculture continues as Pennsylvania's leading industry and job creator because of the hard work, dedication, and innovation of rural families like these."

The Century Farm Program honors families whose farms have been in the same family for more than 100 consecutive years, contain at least 10 of the original acres, and gross more than $1,000 annually from the sale of farm products.

• Adams County — Nancy J. Shelly and Charlotte R. Slaybaugh, Willow Road, Gettysburg, farm purchased in 1812 by their great-great-great grandfather Alexander Young.

• Armstrong County — Wilbur M. and Isabel Beckett, Scenic Drive, Sarver, farm purchased in 1852 by his great grandfather William Beckett.

Lester M. and Linda J, Lutz, Route 2, Kempton, farm purchased in 1858 by his great-great grandparents Isaac and Sybilla Lutz.

• Cambria County — Ralph and Eva Howell, RD 1, Portage, farm purchased in 1892 by his great-great uncle Thomas Roberts.

PNPA To Honor Andrews

appeared Dec. 5, 1992 and concluded on December 19.

The water quality series focused on nitrate problems in groundwater, how to properly construct and manage wells, and the ways farmers can implement a water quality management plan.

Winners in the competition will be honored at the annual Keystone Press Awards banquet on Saturday, May 22 at the Nittany Lion Inn in State College.

The contest is open only to staff members of PNPA, of which Lancaster Farming is a member. Andrews competed against more than 33 other newspapers in the division.

Control Drug Residues

8) Use drug residue screening tests. This includes cows or heifers recently purchased, treated cows to be culled, calves to be sold that have been feed treated milk, and any animals treated. Use commercially available tests to check milk from individual cows, not just the bulk tank. Discard milk that tests positive. (Don't add it to the bulk tank, hoping that it will be diluted to concentrations below the tolerance level, according to the book). Match your testing methodology to that of your milk buyer.

9) Implement employee/family awareness of proper drug use to avoid marketing adulterated products. Let everyone know how to manage drug residues on your farm.

10) Complete the milk and dairy beef residue prevention protocal annually. It's a "written snapshot" of how you manage your operation, said Trumbaurer. The book, available from veterinarians, should be reviewed regularly. After completion, have yourself, the veterinarian, and the field representative of cooperative or proprietary dairy sign the certificate and post it in the milkhouse.

"When you complete this program," said Trumbaurer, "you're not only increasing your awareness and the things you can do, but you're also convincing the public that you are concerned about it.

"What we in the industry need to do is everything in our power to keep this from becoming a more severely perceived problem," he said.

About This Column

My intent is to contribute to this column twice each month for the purpose of showing how DHIA records can be used to help people make more-informed, profitable herd management decisions.

Some of the best ideas for using DHIA data come from dairy producers and from their consultants. I would like to use this column to help share your experiences, too. So, feel free to drop me a line or give me a call to let me know how you use your records in order that others might benefit from your experiences. Write to: Glenn A. Feed Costs Per Cwt. Milk

Good business managers know their costs of production. As business managers, dairy producers need to know their costs of production, too. A good place to start is with feed costs per cwt. of milk. But, what figures should you use, and what should you compare them with?

The DHIA Herd Summary Report shows average feed costs per cwt. of milk for:

- Milking cows on test day.
- Rolling herd average for all cows.
- All cows on test day. This includes dry cows, but NOT heifers.

Since dry cows are a necessary part of the herd, the all-cow figure is probably more useful than the lower figure for milking cows only. But remember, the all-cow figure does NOT include the cost of feeding heifers.

The average all-cow figure for the 1091 Lancaster herds on test with Raleigh in February was $5.18. The figure for all Raleigh herds across the country was $5.40 per cwt. milk.

If you are comparing feed costs per cwt. of milk to current milk prices, you'll want to look at test-day figures. The rolling herd average feed cost is helpful when compared to the average milk price for the year.

As you compare these figues, it is important to think about what affects feed costs per cwt. of milk. Some influencing factors are:

- Lbs. of feed fed. Also, was it reported accurately?
- Price of purchased feeds and values assigned to home-grown feeds. These figues can vary considerably from farm to farm.
- Lbs. of milk produced. There is an overhead cost of feeding each cow. It is called maintenance. Some cows have an additional demand for feed for growth and for developing a fetus. All of this overhead feed cost must be covered by milk sales. The more pounds of milk a cow produces, the more pounds of milk this cost can be spread over, and the lower the cost per cwt. produced. This benefit starts to diminish if too many high priced feed ingredients are fed to support real high levels of production.

Feed costs are determined and reported in many ways. Earlier, I suggested that feed cost per cwt. of milk is probably the most useful. Some other ways of determining and reporting feed costs are:

- Cost of purchased feeds plus the market value of home-grown feeds. Market values can vary considerably from farm to farm, but Lancaster County technicians discuss these values each month and try to keep them as uniform as possible.
- Cost of purchased feeds plus the actual or estimated cost of producing, harvesting and storing home-grown feeds. In addition to these costs, feed-related costs also include a share of the mortgage, taxes, insurance, labor, plus depreciation and repair of machinery and feed storage facilities. If you know these figures for your farm they can be divided by the tons of feed produced to determine your actual costs of production.
- Cost per ton of feed, or feed cost per cow per day. These figures can be very misleading as illustrated by the following extreme example. Old, weathered musty hay is cheap feed, but it won't produce much milk or profit. Starved cows cost less to feed, but they don't produce much milk nor make much profit either.

As you can see, feed costs can vary a lot for a given farm, depending upon what costs you use and how you calculate them. The important thing for you is to report accurate data that is meaningful to you and help your DHIA technician report it accurately on the barn sheets. And, be cautious as you compare your costs to those of other producers; you know how your costs were computed, but you don't know how their's were computed.

Another helpful figure is income over feed cost. While this figure may not be absolutely accurate because of all the variables discussed earlier, it is still a good figure to use for comparing one cow with another. It also provides a clue as to how much profit a cow is making for her stall. Even though a cow is making a small return per day, is she occupying a stall that could be filled by a more profitable cow? On your monthly report this lists all cows, look at a higher producing cow and compare the difference in income over feed costs per day.

If no replacements are available to fill her stall, a small return per day is better than no return at all, and for the little time it takes to milk and feed her, she could still be returning you $6-10 per hour. So it may be profitable to milk her even at low levels of production. This may also give her the time she needs to gain enough additional flesh so she sells for a decent cull cow price. A pound or two of gain per day could be worth another $0.40-0.80 for that stall per day.

Now, as you file your tax returns and your farm figures are handy, take time to calculate your total, itemized costs per cwt. of milk produced. Simply divide each category of cost by the xwts. of milk shipped. This will account for the cost of raising or buying replacements. To be most accurate, you should deduct costs associated with non-feed crops and non-dairy animals.

Comerford Appointed

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — John W. Comerford, Penn State assistant professor of Dairy and Animal Science, has been appointed to the Northeastern Integrated Resource Management (IRM) Committee. The IRM Committee was formed to combine production and financial records into a meaningful description of the business of cattle production and how resources can be used most effectively and profitably.

Comerford hopes the IRM program will help beef producers in the Northeast become more competitive on a national basis. Comerford has been instrumental in planning a Northeastern IRM Workshop to be held in Somerset on April 5-6. Sponsored by USDA and the National Cattleman's Association, the workshop involves Pennsylvania and other states in the Northeast. It is designed to help cattlemen, extension personnel, veterinarians, and others involved in the industry devise an IRM program that will work for our region.

Attendance at the workshop is limited. For more information, contact John Comerford (814-863-3661).

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

HERSHEY (Dauphin Co.) — The outlook for domestic dairy production for cooperative members is good for the short term, but there are some potential problems of which dairy farmers should be aware, according to Robert J. Gray, executive director of the Council of Northeast Farmer Cooperatives, Washington, D.C.

Gray was guest speaker Sunday during the rescheduled annual delegate meeting and annual convention of the Eastern Milk Producers Cooperative, held at the Hershey Lodge and Convention Center.

It was the first time the cooperative, based out of Syracuse, N.Y., held its annual meeting in Hershey. It was only the third time, in the co-op's 70 years that the meeting was held in Pennsylvania.

A high percentage of the expected 200 delegates attended the function which had been scheduled for March 16, but was postponed because of the Blizzard of '93.

Dick Norton, general manager of the Middle Atlantic Milk Marketing Area (MAMMA) dairy promotion agency, was the scheduled luncheon guest speaker, but failed to appear.

Scheduled to speak earlier in the day, Robert J. Gray, who works out of Washington, D.C., addressed the afternoon group.

Gray discussed the way Washington, under the forming Clinton administration, is apparently starting to look at agriculture, in terms of cutting back services, increasing programs for export, and in fighting the national deficit.

Gray presented mostly a positive outlook for the immediate future, but said that there is a lot of uncertainty with the future, including the new U.S. Department of Agriculture.

USDA Appointees Need Confirmation

Mostly, the uncertainty is that, while about 75 percent of the political appointees have been named, most are yet to be confirmed and therefore lack the authority to make progress under currently operating programs, he said.

He said it means that, until some people get Senate confirmation, there will be no action to implement changes, such as those anticipated with federal order pricing structures.

Gray said that producers should be pleased that the dairy assessment program created under the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act is not projected to increase for the next several years.

However, he did warn that there are some in Congress and Washington who are discussing boosting the dairy producer's assessment in 1996 from the current 11.25 cents to 18 cents per hundredweight.

He said that currently $146 million is raised through the assessment program.

Gray said that while the dairy industry may have gotten off initially unscathed by the change in power and people, other industries of U.S. agriculture have been hit hard in proposals for reductions in federal spending.

He said that target price support commodity programs, such as for grains, have seen a significant reduction in acreage eligibility for deficiency programs. Gray said circulating proposals include a lot of changes that farmers don't like.

He said that there is also some pressure from some Midwest and Southern representatives to lighten the cuts, because of a feeling that they are getting hit too hard.

On the administration's economic stimulus package, Gray said that there are "a few things okay for agriculture."

Economic Stimulus

He said that while the stimulus package was trimmed down from the initially estimated $30 to $40 billion, there is projected to be about $75 million going to Women, Infants and Children (WIC) programs for food subsidies. He said there is also another $88 billion total targeted for the emergency food program and another public food-welfare programs.

"It could be of benefit for the dairy industry," Gray said, explaining that all these public nutrition programs incorporate dairy products.

Also, Gray praised an investment tax credit program which is to go into effect for projects done in 1993, and for which farmers are eligible.

The credit program is to start off with providing a 5-percent credit and then is to continue on a permanent 5-percent basis.

He said there is also to be an extension of a previous health program deduction of 25 percent.

Gray said he is keeping close track on what the health program proposals are going to be. A deduction on health insurance premiums is proposed, but Gray said he wasn't sure how it would affect the self-employed.

As far as work for reorganization of the USDA, the proposal is to condense the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service with the Soil Conservation Service and the Farm Home Administration to form one agency called the Farm Service Agency.

Consideration for including extension services from land-grant universities into the one-agency program was apparently dropped.

Gray said that while he applauds consideration for increasing efficiency and lowering costs of USDA operation, people should be careful so as to not bog down the USDA with re-organization mandates which would prevent the agency missions from being completed.

"Back in 1976-77, when Carter came in, they were going to reorganize USDA. They spent two years trying to re-organize and never got anywhere."

Gray said that he was "all for cutting down on plush jobs and the number of assistants" on the USDA payroll.

"We can do some things to streamline, but when it gets to infighting among the different agencies, it is wasted energy," he said, because everybody spends time on inter-office subterfuge and not on completing service work.

FDA Sets BST Hearing

In other news, Gray said that a public hearing on BST is set for 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m., March 31, at the Holiday Inn, in Gaithersburg, Md. The hearing is being held by the Veterinary Medical Advisory Committee of the Food and Drug Administration, and may be the final hearing before FDA gives approval.

This controversial hormone has undergone several years of review by the Food and Drug Administration without being rejected on any scientific basis. However, some have objected to adopting the technology for personal, ethical, or economic protection reasons.

BST is a hormone produced by the cow which serves to direct nutrients to the mammaries for the production of milk.

The hormone is artificially produced in the same way that insulin is currently produced, using genetically altered bacteria. Some proposed applications of the product would be to inject the hormone into a lactating cow. The result has been an average increase in milk production by 10 or more pounds.

On a percentage basis, the amount of extra milk produced varies with each cow, according to how much milk that individual cow produced previous to BST therapy.

Since BST is in all milk, and because levels do not discernably increase, there are no tests which can detect the difference between milk produced with BST and milk produced otherwise.

According to Gray, within 60 days after the public hearing, BST could possibly be approved for use. That would mean, that by August, it is possible that dairymen may begin using BST commercially.

The public hearing is to address an abstract, cause-and-effect connection between the use of the hormone and public health.

The concern is that — because there has been shown to be statistical increase in mastitis among cows treated with BST, and since cows are treated with antibiotics to combat infections — milk will show up in the market place with antibiotics and thereby posing a threat to public health.

The concern, raised by the formal administration's investigative agency, the General Accounting Office (GAO), apparently assumes that current milk testing-rejection programs are ineffectual for antibiotics. It must also assume that farmers somehow would become more incapable of keeping milk from antibiotic-treated cows from going into a milk tank.

Although Gray didn't specifically address other ramifications of the FDA approval process, the issue does have potential to affect other areas of concern.

Negotiations with Mexico on the North American Free Trade Agreement are hinging on two major issues, both of which narrow down to one thing — production limitations.

Specifically, BST has been legal in Mexico for at least a year.

While there have been no reports of concern about Mexico using BST, that fact has the potential to be a cause of controversy in the NAFTA negotiations.

Gray said he thinks BST will probably be approved for use in the United States, but that presents some challenges, mostly public relations, to the entire dairy industry.

In addition to some farmer objections to its use, there are domestic animal rights groups and various family-farmer-protectionist groups and individuals — some extremist, others respected by mainline producers — which have decried the use of BST and similar technology.

More than BST, it is these misleading, fear-spreading opposition groups and the resultant consumer reaction which should be of concern to the industry, according to Gray.

He said that already there is some talk in the U.S. Congress about introducing legislation which would delay release of BST onto the market.

Of the tacts under consideration by some congressmen is a plan to introduce legislation which would delay domestic approval of BST until the Eastern European Community has done so, Gray said.

Another would be to require that the current U.S. manufacturers of the product be made to set up an indemnification program — such as posting a bond — to pay farmers for loss of cattle, if any, due directly to use of BST.

However, Gray said that these measures should be seen as mere stalling tactics.

To combat the potential negative effect of the controversy on the entire dairy industry, Gray said, "We must come up with strategies and policy."

In other areas of concern, Gray said the pending NAFTA is far from a sure thing, but that it would be good for the U.S. dairy industry.

According to Gray, the demand for currently available dairy products in Mexico is greater than the supply, furthermore, the agreement would allow duty-free introduction of additional types of U.S. dairy products into Mexico.

However, Gray said opposition is growing because of two major concerns — labor and environment.

Concerns are that creating a free-trade zone would benefit those trading partners who deny workers the same benefits as American counterparts, thus making it cheaper to produce where labor is rewarded less.

A smiliar argument also is held by some for environmental concerns — that those who spend nothing for long term environmental protection will reap the biggest monetary gain, though short term, on such a free-trade pact.

Gray said that there are also those who oppose NAFTA because they oppose free trade, and believe in a protectionist economic philosophy.

"If NAFTA were up today (for a vote before Congress), it would be tough to pass. In a few months, when they work out the side agreements, it is still going to take some work."

In other aspects of trade, the dairy industry benefitted from the Dairy Export Incentive Program (DEIP), Gray said.

Export of dairy products seemed to take off with sales to the former Soviet Bloc countries, under DEIP, Gray said. That means DEIP is helping to keep on-farm prices higher, because demand is increased.

On the other hand, there is currently a 10-metric ton milk powder shipment going overseas which was provided by 12 regional cooperatives.

"In addition to the humanitarian aid, they're looking at the potential trade and trade in general" in providing the food and sending representatives over, Gray said.

The cooperatives were praised by Gray for taking an initiative in looking to see where they can help themselves develop trade agreements.

Ag Cuts Will Be Determined Through Farm Bill

SIOUX FALLS, S.D. — Major agricultural budget cuts were postponed until 1996 in order to give time to consider changes needed in the 1995 farm bill, President Bill Clinton announced in a video taped message to the National Farmers Union Convention.

President Clinton told NFU convention delegates that agriculture would be asked to participate in the nation's deficit reduction efforts. However, he noted that agriculture had already experienced signficiant budget cuts in the last budget compromise.

He said his economic package purposely postponed the major agricultural cuts to give time for his administaration to put their stamp on agricultural and rural policies.

Clinton indicated his administration would be willing to consider how the proposed budget cuts would be carried out. He said he wanted to hold off on major agricultural cuts until after his administration is able to work out the 1995 farm law to better serve the needs of family farmers.

He told the convention that his plans for the national economy won't happen until rural America prospers again. He also promised that he would put family farm agriculture in the forefront of his plans for rebuilding the nation.

He reviewed his proposals to audit every federal program to achieve the necessary savings for deficit reductions. "We will not raise taxes, until we can get these savings from our budget," he said.

He affirmed his commitment to carry out major rural development programs and improving rural infrastructures, including roads, bridges, and water and sewer systems.

Clinton expressed appreciation to the farm organization. "The National Farmers Union was the only major farm organization to endorse our program for change. Together we will make that change happen for America," he said

MILK AMERICA'S HEALTH KICK

NFU Must Lead Ag Policy

SIOUX FALLS, S.D. — National Farmers Union must continue to lead agricultural policy development as the nation takes a new economic course, Lee Swenson, the national president of the farm group told the organization's 91st annual convention.

"There are still important issues that we need to address," Swenson said. He encouraged the organization's members to continue in the policy formation process. Among issues that Swenson said needed further attention are farm income improvements, the reorganization of USDA, international trade agreements, energy taxation, and health care.

Swenson said the organization must move forward in its policy objectives as the nation downsizes government and reduces federal deficits. "We want to be part of the decision-making process when the proposed cuts for agricultural outlays, totalling $2.7 billion are made over the next four years," he said.

The NFU president said the farm organization is proposing that farm programs be based on farming units, rather than being doled out according to acreage allotments. "We must target federal support to family farmers, rather than the corporate farms and absentee owners who have been farming the farm program," he said.

Swenson said the organization had tremendous challenges ahead. "1992 commodity prices were lower than they were twelve years ago. We have lost a quarter of million farmers in the last decade."

It was for those reasons that rural Americans became involved in the political process, he said. "We saw a need for change and we led the charge to elect a government of change both in the executive and legislative branches," he said.

Swenson reported that is excited about the new U.S. government and voiced delight with the new Secretary of Agriculture Mike Espy.

MILK CHECK

THOMAS JURCHAK
Dairy Specialist
Lackawanna County

SCRANTON (Lackawanna Co.) — After falling 95 cents during December and January, the Minnesota-Wisconsin Price Series appeared to be bottoming out, mainly on the strength of rising nonfat dry milk prices and steady cheese prices in January and February.

Further drops in the M-W were expected but none so severe as in the past.

That's the way it happened in February, with the M-W falling 15 cents to $10.74. That's apparently not too far from the bottom for this year. If that happens, the low in March may be a little higher and come a little sooner than expected.

However, the M-W will still be 28 to 30 cents below the $10.98 price of last March, before it starts the expected seasonal increase during late spring months.

Much of the credit for slowing the fall of the M-W price in February will have to go to increasing powder prices.

From a December average of $1.09 a pound in the upper Midwest, the price went as high as $1.16 the last week of February. Powder prices reached the point where butter/powder plants were competing with cheese processors for milk supplies.

Export Subsidy

The increase in demand for powder came largely from the Dairy Export Incentive Program (DEIP). Last year bids were accepted into DEIP for more than 155,000 metric tons of dairy products.

Seventy-three percent, or 113,000 metric tons of that was on nonfat dry powder.

Then USDA announced that it would offer DEIP contracts for 204,000 metric tons of powder in 1993, and in January accepted contracts for 367 and 1,000 tons of whole milk powder.

The bids were accepted by processors and the powder got made, but now there are delays in exporting it and powder prices are falling back to January levels.

Another export situation to watch is grain shipments to Russia.

Moscow has defaulted on more than $300 billion of U.S.-backed loans for grain and other farm products. If we cut off their credit, some of the 16 million tons we had hoped to sell them may stay here and affect feed prices.

Cheese Prices Up

One of the best things about the dairy industry is that you have so many products to sell that you don't have to rely on a single market.

This month you have an example of the benefit of diverse products and markets — weakening powder prices being offset by increasing cheese prices. That may keep the M-W from falling much more this spring.

Cheese prices had fallen to a low of $1.16 by Jan. 15, but never dropped further because powder prices went up.

Since then, cheese prices have increased 3- and 4-cents per pound to within 1 cent of what they were at the end of 1992.

After staying flat for six weeks at $1.16, the price of cheese blocks jumped 3 cents, and barrel prices went up 4 cents per pound, within two weeks. Those were the first increases since last October.

Some market watchers feel this is too much of an increase and too soon to be sustained, but that depends mainly on milk supplies. And in January the milk supplies increased less than 1 percent over last year.

Yet to come is the effect of the "storm of the century" that was occurring as I wrote this.

Farm Programs Must Target Family Farm

SIOUX FALLS, S.D. — Farm program benefits must be targeted to the production levels of family farm operators, according to policies adopted by delegates to the National Farmers Union's 91st anniversary convention.

Delegates approved a policy statement which declared that targeting of farm program benefits would reduce government costs while furthering the sustainability of family farmers, rural communities, and natural resources.

The organization views future farm policy options as a narrowing choice between continued decoupling versus targeting. As federal budgetary constraints reduce funding available for agricultural programs, farmers and farm policy decision makers have to choose between across-the-board cuts and targeted benefits, the organization said.

While the organization continued its historic support for strengthening supply-management programs, it acknowledged that the current farm law and trade policy directions have weakened the nation's ability to effectively manage agricultural supply-demand and pricing levels, thereby intensifying the need for targeting.

Targeting must provide cost-of-production returns and a reasonable livelihood from the basic output of a family-sized farm, according to Farmers Union.

Farmers Union would achieve targeting by limiting federal price supports to the number of bushels produced by a typical family farm operation. It would also target benefits by the use of tiered marketing quotas, set-asides, and other farm program mechanisms which would direct greater support for small to medium-sized farm and ranch operators.

The organization would also establish overall limits on farm program payments, and commodity or marketing loans.

The Farmers Union charged that decoupling with its across-the-board cuts have placed the burden of agricultural budget reductions on the backs of small and mid-sized farm operators, while allowing the largest farm operations in the nation to receive their full entitlements.

"To add insult to injury, the expansion of payment limitation eligibility has been facilitated in recent years for these same large operations," the NFU resolution noted.

The organization stated that steps in decoupling began with the lowering of commodity loan levels to less than out-of-pocket production costs and with the establishment of the triple base system.

"Decoupling so far has provided further artificial competitive advantages to the largest farms while collapsing the very safety net that was originally established for family farmers. The failure of the current farm program to protect family farmers is evidence by the loss of hundreds of thousands of family farmers during the past decade," the farm group's policy declared.

The NFU organization said it is adamantly opposed to continued decoupling and believes targeting is the most viable public policy alternative available today to respond to the crisis facing family farm agriculture.

It warned that family farmers were becoming an endangered economic species as production and land ownerhips are concentrated into the hands of fewer and fewer larger than family sized and corporate farm units.

The organization also outlined support for a targeting plan which protect family-farmers from the scheduled cuts in the 1994 and 1995 crop years when deficiency payments become based on twelve month, rather than five-month marketing averages.

The targeting policy was part of a 200-page document adopted by the convention delegates. The NFU program of policy and action covers a broad of rural, agricultural, economic, and human issues affecting farmers and their families.

Farmers Protest Proposed Cuts

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — Soybean farmers are gravely concerned about some aspects of the Clinton Administration's proposed plan to cut ag spending and impose new fees, including a proposal to increase the loan origination fee on soybeans from 10 cents to 17 cents per bushel.

A farmer representative of the American Soybean Association (ASA) testified before Congress recently in support of the broad goal of reducing the federal deficit. However, they stressed a need to treat agriculture fairly and noted a number of drawbacks to the Administration's proposed deficit reduction package.

"We want to support President Clinton's bold move to control spending and we are willing to do our part. However, rural Americans should not be asked to pay more than their fair share," said Larry Diedrich, a soybean farmer from Elkton, S.D., who serves as first vice president of ASA.

Diedrich notes agriculture has been part of every deficit reduction package, and during the last 10 years, spending on agriculture has been reduced by $57 billion. "After these sacrifices, we are now asked to absorb three times more cuts in terms of percent of budget than any other non-defense domestic sector," he said. "Of the $150 billion proposed in spending cuts and fees for non-defense programs during FY94-97, 5.4 percent of the cuts are in USDA-administered programs."

In testimony before the House of Representatives' Committee on Agriculture, Diedrich outlined areas of particular concern to soybean farmers. He pointed out that the loan origination fee, even at its current level, seriously reduces the effectiveness of the soybean marketing loan.

"According to ASA calculations, the origination fee has cut soybean loan activity in half from 1990 levels by increasing effective interest rates to well above commercial levels," he said. "Even at the two percent rate, the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS) projects future use will continue to decline. A higher fee of 3.33 percent will result in little or no use of the loan. No one wins with this proposed increase."

Diedrich also singled out other troublesome aspects of the Administration's proposal. "One major concern to soybean farmers is the broad-based energy tax. This tax will affect virtually every aspect of farm activities, from direct costs of diesel for tractors and equipment to indirect costs for pesticides and fertilizers," he said.

Diedrich expressed disappointment with the President's proposal to reduce market development-oriented foreign food aid by $245 million and to cut $35 million in funding for USDA's Foreign Agriculture Service (FAS).

"Food assistance programs have been an important market for U.S. soybean farmers," he said. "FAS is an effective agency that provides instrumental support for ASA's overseas operations. Any reductions in market development activities are counterproductive when we are facing tougher market competition."

Diedrich emphasizes soybean farmers want to do their part to return the government to solid financial ground. But he said, "I do not believe this goal can be accomplished on the back of American agriculture. We must find a better solution where the burden is truly shared."

While most lenders have barely scratched the surface in agriculture, we've gone a bit further.

Fact is, you can explain your needs to some bankers until you're blue in the face and chances are they still won't understand. Farm Credit loan officers, on the other hand, have been through the most comprehensive ag lending training program in the nation. And many have farm backgrounds themselves.

They can approve loans for just about any farm need from land to equipment. And since a committee isn't necessary for most decisions, loan approval is easy and fast.

Stop by and talk with your Farm Credit loan officer.

Family Finds Miniature Horses Are Ideal Pets

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

LEOLA (Lancaster Co.) — When passersby see Cliff and Sue Martin taking their pet for a walk, they slow down for a second look.

It's not a dog on the leash although it's about the same size, and it's too small for a pony or a colt.

"What is it?" people ask.

It's a miniature horse. In fact, the Martins have eight miniature horses, which have all the characteristics of standard-size horses but not the height.

The dainty animals are gaining in popularity in the area, although the breed has been around since the 16th century. Through selective breeding and inbreeding, European royalty bred the miniatures as pets for young princes and princesses.

Wars and the decline of Europe during the 18th century caused the breed to almost disappear and the miniature horses were mostly delegated to circuses until the 1930s, when miniature horses were introduced to the U.S. The horses were not used as pets but to pull coal cars from the the depths of coal mines where the tunnels were too small for mules and horses.

Miniature horses were regarded as novelties until the 1970s when several breeders imported the finest thoroughbred and Arab-type miniatures from Europe.

Several miniature horse associations register the horses, but the horses must be five years old before registration. This is to guaranteed that growth is completed. To be officially registered in the American Miniature Horse Association, the miniature horses must not exceed 34 inches when measured from the ground to the last hairs on the mane.

The horses come in all colors. The Martins prefer Pintos, which they breed to sell the offspring. According to Sue, black and white Pintos and Appaloosas are the most desired type, but color preferences go in cycles.

"There's a smell about horses that is wonderful," Sue said.

She grew up on a dairy farm and always had a riding horse. After she had a scary riding accident, her husband said, "That's enough of that."

Sue sold her horse and Cliff sold his 1934 Chevy Street Rod and used the money to invest in miniatures.

"It was a good move," Sue said. "Miniatures are very gentle and are something the whole family can enjoy."

The Martins have three daughters, Amy, 9; Kim, 7; and Audrey, 5; who often play with the horses in the yard or use them for cart rides. Walking the horses prepare them for showing and keep them in shape.

"The horses are so playful and become very attached to the people they are around," Sue said. "They actually act very much like puppies by following you around." She told of one horse jumping in their laps when they were seated on the lawn watching its antics.

At birth, the horses average 18- to 22-inches. Within three years, the horse almost reaches its maximun height, but may grow 10 percent more. For this reason, the horse cannot be registered to make sure that all growth has occurred.

The Martins show their stock at the Mid-Atlantic Horse Show, where most of the classes found at full-size horse competitions are available. Riding classes are not available, but halter and driving classes are held.

According to Sue, miniature horses seem to be more common in Maryland, New Jersey, and Virginia than in Pennsylvania. But popularity is growing as many people find that miniatures are much easier to keep than standard size horses.

"A horse can be kept in a backyard. I even know one woman who keeps hers in a doghouse," Sue said.

The breed doesn't require much feed. According to Sue, a miniature horse eats one cup of grain and one-half flake hay a day. One bale of hay lasts a whole month.

The horses are fed in the morning and let out to pasture at noon. At 4 p.m., the horses are brought in and fed again.

"You must be careful not to let them eat too much," Sue said.

The breed needs the same shots and care as other horses. Feed must be clean and kept in airtight containers.

During birthing, a person must be there to keep the foal from suffocating. Because of breeding, the horses have become smaller ones but the birth sac has remained as tough as for larger animals. The animal cannot break the sac.

The Martins installed a camera over each stall. Each horse wears a special halter with a mercury switch so that birth contractions may be monitored while the Martins are in the house.

"I wear a warm-up suit to bed during the birthing season," Sue said. "By the time I get to the barn after the monitor goes off, the sac is coming out.

"The horse should come out like a little diver, but often its legs are twisted and need to be untangled."

Other than the problem with the sac, birthing is generally uneventful and the foals are hardy. It is a stressful time for foals during weaning, and yearlings must be watched for respiratory infections.

Because the Martins have this sophisticated birthing set up, they offer boarding and foaling services. They use all their own breeding stock and contract services to others. The average foal costs $2,500, and a mare, $3,000 to $7,000.

Gestation period is 11 months. The foals are born in April and weaned at three months.

If more information is desired, contact the Martins at Pinto Park Miniature Horses, 184 Newport Rd., Leola, PA 17540 (717) 656-7635.

Cliff and Sue Martin with Amy, 9; Kim, 7; and Audrey, 5; find that raising miniature horses is a hobby the whole family enjoys.

Audrey admires Andy's tail as Kim scratches his ears. An old wife's tale claims that the horse stops growing when its tail reaches the ground. The Martins believe the tale holds some truth.

Homestead Notes

On being a farm wife - And other hazards

Joyce Bupp

January was just too early to worry about it.

February would have been ideal. But the string of snowy weekends and continuing cold weather just didn't set the mood for getting the job done. A couple of comparative lists compiled while snuggled in a sleeping bag on an easy chair next to the woodstove at the mountain cabin was as close as it got.

And then the lists laid here, forgotten.

It took a balmy day in early March to jolt the attention. Spring was a mere few days away — and not one seed catalog order had gone into the mail.

True, a whole plastic container of assorted seed packet leftovers from prior seasons waits in cold storage in a corner of the basement. But not a single Early Girl tomato seed could be found in the collection.

Tomatoes are a backbone staple of our summertime diet, the earlier in the season, the better. And the point of growing an early tomato variety is to have early eating - not likely when the seeds aren't even ordered by mid-March.

I hustled off to the neighborhood garden center that afternoon, by-passing the catalogs to carry home a pack of Early Girl seeds. Along with a length of lovely lavendar-colored paper twist, destined to replace the Christmas red on the front door grapevine wreath with something more Easter-like.

Atmosphere of the garden center triggered a megacase of spring-fever. The rest of the afternoon was spent in the greenhouse, repotting young geraniums already opening cheery red and pink blooms and calendulas sporting bright orange daisy-blossoms.

Milking time arrived before cuttings had been made from last year's snapdragon plants wintered over, or the budding forget-me-nots moved into larger pots. And there was still that potting soil to sterilize for those tomato seeds. Tomorrow.

Then Mother Nature smacked us procrastinators with the Blizzard of '93.

Plans to sterilize soil got buried under 18 inches of snow blown around by 50 mph. winds, cows calving at the peak of the blizzard, and ongoing concerns that the electricity continue flowing and the milk truck make it through.

(A heartfelt personal thanks to everyone, everywhere, who helped keep milk trucks moving, electricity flowing, and plowed open drifted rural roads.)

Anyway, the snow piled around the greenhouse helped insulate it against the bitter weather while we tackled farm chores made more complicated by the storm. No use to dig it out.

Days later, when sunshine and balmier breezes turned drifts to slush, a phone conversation with a friend jolted my memory. All her garden seedlings already had several leaves.

That did it.

Minutes later, pots filled with potting soil went into the microwave. And after milking, the cooled, sterilized, mini-seedbeds were planted with two varieties each of tomatoes and marigolds and moved onto the top of the water heater to germinate in the gently-warm location.

By morning, a seed catalog order was tallied and ready for mailing. The immediate urgency, however, had diminished, since the bulk of the order was for seeds, plants, bulbs and supplies not needed until outside planting time.

Since a foot of compacting snow covered the garden — and a small spring has been known to gurgle through the garden during really wet years anyway — my procrastination guilt has resided a bit.

But, there may be no Early Girls this year.

Just Slightly Late Girls.

Gary Kurtz, 4-H Council president, announced the awards while Sandy Gross, the Berks County Dairy Princess, and Katie Hartman, the L'il Miss Dairy Princess, presented the trophies.

Mistress of ceremonies was Sarah Johnson, alternate dairy princess. As such, she sometimes fills in for Sandy for the school promotions the Dairy Princess does every winter.

Recently, Sarah related during the entertainment portion of the evening, while she was talking to kindergarteners, one little boy demanded to know where "baby calves" come from.

Caught unawares, Sarah said she hemmed and hawed for a few seconds and finally said, "Their mothers."

"I didn't want to get into specifics," Sarah said. "I thought their parents could do that."

That quieted the little boy for a few moments until he, apparently still curious, again asked where "baby calves" come from.

Suddenly, Sarah thought of the answer.

Applying For Tax Credits

Recent news about tax increases has overshadowed an opportunity that could put money in some families' pockets. If you earned less than $22,370 in 1992 and had at least one child living at home, call 1-800-TAX-1040 to see if you are eligible to receive up to $2,211 credit. If you don't owe any taxes, call anyway. You may receive a refund.

The tax credit is possible through the Earned Income Credit (EIC). This program is for working families with low to moderate incomes. You must have been employed during 1992, and you must have had a child or other eligible dependent living with you for at least six months during the tax year. Some families who would not normally qualify may be within the given standards this year due to lay-offs or unemployment during part of the year.

Nationally, more than 14 percent of the families eligible for EIC benefits are not receiving them, either because they do not know about them or because they have not filed for various reasons. In some rural areas, the percentage is much higher. Farm families who have an accountant file their business and personal returns should make sure this potential credit is explored.

Most families who have an adjusted gross incomes between $6,000 and $13,000 will qualify for at least $1,000. But no family can receive this credit without having first filed a 1040 or a 1040A federal income tax return. An individual must do this even if she has no income tax withheld from her paycheck. She must also file the "Schedule EIC." The IRS will NOT credit the amount automatically. All filers should know that they only need to complete the front side of the Schedule EIC. If they choose, the IRS will complete the more complicated calculations on the second side of the form and compute the credit for them.

Those married couples who use the "married couple filing separately" status and those families using the 1040EZ forms cannot claim the credit. For the 1993 tax year, workers may want to file a W-5 form with their employers. This allows the extra income to be included in small increments with each paycheck rather than waiting for a refund next April. Farmers who don't receive a regular "paycheck" will owe less money at the end of the year.

This credit is not included in the income that determines eligibility for public assistance funds. Families who currently receive SSI, medicaid or AFDC support should not avoid filing in fear that their other support is in jeopardy.

If a family does qualify for the credit and receives a refund, the members should think carefully about the use of that money. Thoughtful planning will multiply the value of the refund. For instance, applying the refund to outstanding credit card bills will save significant amounts. Today, some credit card companies are charging between 16 and 20% on the balance owed. When savings are earning as little as 3% in savings accounts, paying off a bill that is charging 20% interest is an excellent investment.

Some families may choose to use the refund to pay for much-needed medical insurance for their members if an employer or association does not provide coverage. This is another wise use of the funds.

More than 14 million families now qualify for this credit. Is your family one of them? Don't delay. Fill out the EIC schedule and file it with your return this week. Even those families not eligible for the EIC, should definitely file a tax return. The IRS estimates that between 5 and 6 million people do not file income tax returns — 45% of whom are eligible for refunds!

Cook The Pink Out Of Hamburger

TOWANDA (Bradford Co.) — Cook the Pink Out of Hamburger A recent outbreak of foodborne illness in the western U.S. has caused many consumers to be concerned about the safety of ground beef.

The outbreak occurred when hamburgers at a fast food restaurant chain were not cooked at high enough temperature to destroy a bacteria that was present in the meat. The bacteria was a form of the Escherichia coli bacteria, named E. coli 0157:H7. According to Penn State University Food Scientist, Dr. Stephen Knabel, E. coli 0157:H7 is fairly rare and easily destroyed when meats are cooked to well-done.

This outbreak serves as a reminder to home cooks and food service staff that proper handling of food can prevent food-borne illness. In the U.S., it is estimated that more than 60 million cases of food-borne illness occur each year, resulting in several thousand deaths and billions of dollars in lost wages, medical and legal expenses. Often food-borne illness is mistaken for the flu or a 24 hour "bug."

About 90% of the cases of food-borne illness each year are caused by improper handling of food at home and at the food service establishment. To ensure the safety of the ground beef that you use, practice the following:

+ Cook all ground beef products until the center is gray and the juices run clear. This occurs when the internal temperature reaches 160°F.

+ Thick hamburger patties are more likely to be undercooked, particularly if they have been made ahead, frozen, and cooked without thawing.

+ Frozen ground beef should be thawed before cooking to ensure that it cooks completely.

+ Defrost ground beef (and all meats and poultry) in the refrigerator to prevent growth of bacteria. Allow approximately 24 hours to thaw a 1 to 1-½ inch thick package. Ground beef that is thawed in the microwave oven should be cooked immediately after thawing.

+ To avoid contaminating other foods with bacteria, wash cutting boards, dishes, utensils, and surfaces that have come in contact with raw meat in hot soapy water.

+ Sanitizing dishes and equipment, in addition to washing, reduces the number of bacteria more than just washing. To sanitize, for every gallon of clean, lukewarm (not hot) water, add one tablespoon of liquid chlorine bleach. Immerse washed and rinsed dishes in this solution for one minute. Air dry. It is not necessary to rinse the dishes. If the solution begins to get sudsy, it will be ineffective in sanitizing. Change the water and make a new solution.

+ Counter tops and equipment that cannot be immersed in water should be washed and rinsed and then sanitized by wiping with a clean cloth dipped in a sanitizing solution of two tablespoons of chlorine bleach for every gallon of lukewarm water. Air dry.

+ Before starting to prepare food, wash hands in warm soapy water. While handling food, wash hands after handling raw foods, using the toilet or helping someone else use the toilet, changing a diaper, smoking, touching the face or hair, or after handling dirty utensils, dishes, or other non-food items. All of these can be sources of bacteria.

+ Bacteria grow rapidly between 40°F and 140°F. Do not hold raw or cooked meats in this temperature range for longer than two hours.

+ Refrigerate cooked meat after serving. Divide into small portions that will cool quickly.

+ For more information on keeping food safe to eat, contact Penn State Cooperative Extension, 701 South Fourth Street, Towanda, PA 18848, phone (717) 265-2896, and ask for, A Quick Consumer Guide To Food Safety.

Salute To National Nutrition Month

Mealtime will be getting a whole new look in 1993. The reason? Americans are hungry for nutritious, healthy food — and they want it fast. Consider these facts and figures:

- It's projected Americans will buy $33 billion worth of low-cholesterol and low-fat foods in 1993.
- More than a third of American households are eating more fresh vegetables than they did a year ago.
- Microwaves are now in 80 percent of American's households and they are being used more frequently and in more ways than ever before.
- The average woman spends 60.7 minutes a day preparing dinner; 44 percent say this is less time than she spent in the same task three years ago. The ideal meal preparation time, however, is less than 30 minutes.

Corning has released a new cookbook of 200 kitchen-tasted, good-tasting recipes. Nutritious and easy to prepare, they combine fresh ingredients with low-fat, low-sodium, and low-cholesterol requirements.

To order a copy of the cookbook, which costs $19.95 plus postage and handling, call 1-800-999-3436.

What's New In Frozen Breakfasts

It is estimated that one out of every four people eat breakfast while driving to work. No wonder the food industry is introducing frozen and hand-held breakfast entrees at an unprecedented speed. Several companies offer English muffin, bagel or croissant sandwiches that can be zapped in the microwave and ready for the road in five minutes or less.

No one can argue about their convenience, but the numerous frozen breakfasts on the market today vary in how they fit into the reduced-fat diet recommended for good health. In the sandwich category, Healthy Choice's English Muffin Sandwich contains 200 calories, 13 percent from fat. In comparison, Sara Lee's Ham and Swiss Cheese Croissant boasts 320 caloreies with nearly 50 percent from fat. In the biscuit arena, Jimmy Dean's Sausage Biscuits supply only 110 calories per biscuit, but 62 percent are fat calories. If sausage biscuits are your taste treat, consider trying the light version. Made with pork and turkey, they contain 110 calories with 30 percent from fat per biscuit.

Generally speaking, sandwiches made with English muffins and bagels are lower in fat calories than those made with croissants and biscuits. However, the amount and type of spread and filling used make a difference too. Sausage and bacon are particularly high in fat calories.

Pancakes, French toast, eggs and sausage also come in handy pre-made frozen form, ready to be microwaved in little more time than it takes to pour cereal and milk into a bowl. Some of these items, however, may be high in fat, so it is important to consider how they fit into your daily diet before you put your cereal bowl away. Check the nutrition information on the package for this information.

Along with fat, all breakfast items surveyed supply a good deal of sodium, 15 to 50 percent of the daily value now recommended by the Food and Drug Administration. Sodium conscious or not, those who opt for frozen breakfast items may want to think about having some low- or non-fat milk, as well as an orange, banana, or some other fruit, with their meal. These additions help supply the calcium, vitamin C and fiber most frozen breakfasts lack.

An Ounce Of Prevention

Food poisoning from eating undercooked hamburgers grabbed headlines recently. The culprit is a strain of coliform bacteria. Consumers can avoid problems by eating ground meats cooked well-done-in-the-middle. Other steps you can take include:

* When shopping buy meat patties and other perishables last.
* Freeze ground meat immediately at 0 degrees or below and use within three or four months. Or refrigerate immediately at 40 degrees F or below and use within two days.
* Defrost meat in your refrigerator or microwave; never defrost on your kitchen counter.
* Cook ground meat patties to an internal temperature of 160 degrees F. When done, the patty should be very hot, the center gray or brown and juices clear with no traces of pink.
* When microwaving patties, rotate food for even cooking. Depending on oven wattage, you may need to cook longer at higher settings.
* Let patties stand a few minutes after cooking so the temperature equalizes throughout the product.

FORD (Bedford Co.) — Eight-year-old Rachel Miller sighed heavily as she wiped the frost from the widow pane and stared out at still another snow storm on this late February day in 1856.

"Ah, but Rachel, it's a spring-like snow," consoled her mother as she pulled her daughter's blond hair into tight braids.

"See, it's heavy, wet, like the snows in the spring."

"Oh how I wish it would end," Rachel sighed again. "It's been weeks since we have seen anyone except each other."

It had indeed been a long, hard, winter. Rachel's father had died shortly after harvest last fall. Pneumonia had been Dr. Smythe's diagnosis.

That winter in the Pennsylvania mountains had been difficult. Rachel and her mother had to shovel their way to the barn each morning and evening to milk the two cows which kept them well supplied with milk.

Despite an absence of money, they did have plenty of food. There were rows of canned vegetables and fruits in the basement. Hams hung in the smoke house and a dozen or more hens provided an ample egg supply. Wheat harvested last fall had been ground into flour for bread and the cave behind their log home provided shelter for potatoes, carrots, and a few apples.

Only this morning, Rachel's hopes had soared as the sun had come out and created a warmth they have not felt since long before Christmas. Birds had sung in the tall maple trees near the house. Then, it had grown colder and the snow started as evening approached.

"Tomorrow," said Rachel's mother. "We will go to the woods and see if the sap is starting to run. This is perfect weather for tapping trees. We are going to make maple syrup!"

"Oh," said Rachel brightening. "Can we invite the Amicks? Can we mother? We could have a "sugarin off" party.

"Why not," mother beamed. "If the snow isn't too deep until morning, we will begin."

Light had barely streaked across the sky when Rachel leaped from her feather mattress located in the loft of the Miller home.

After helping mother with the morning milking and a breakfast of fresh eggs, bread, and milk, they headed for the woods.

Already the sun had come out and, in a repeat of yesterday, was creating warmth.

In the shed behind the barn they found the "keelers," or buckets Rachel's father had made and, using a special boring tool, bored a hole in the trunk of one of the trees.

"These warm days and cold nights are just what we want for good, sweet, syrup," said Rachel's mother as she wiped the perspiration from her brow. Boring a hole into the trunk was a difficult job for a woman and a young girl. A spile, used as a drain from the tree, was inserted in each hole.

"Now Rachel," she said. "I want you to eat lunch and head for the Amicks. Tell them, the sap is starting to run and we'll be "sugarin off," by the weekend. When you get back, we'll do your school work."

It was a three-mile-walk to the Amicks, and, while Rachel meant to get right home, she did enjoy some talk and play with her friend, Emily. Emily Amick was almost a year older than Rachel and a fun friend. The girls were full of plans for the upcoming weekend.

The sun was already starting to set as Rachel headed down the path for home. Mrs. Amick wanted her to stay over, but Rachel knew her mother would be worried.

By the time she had gone the first mile, huge snowflakes were starting to fall.

By the end of the second mile, darkness had enveloped Rachel. Hunger pangs were starting to set in and the swirling snowflakes along with the white carpeted earth was disorienting.

Several times, Rachel wandered off the path she normally traversed between her home and the Amicks.

Tears were beginning to slide down her freckled cheeks and her braids were freezing stiff. The first snowflakes had only made her hair wet, now she was freezing. Her feet felt numb inside her rubber boots.

In the woods which covered the last mile of her journey, Rachel found one tree looking exactly like another.

She was so tired and cold she wanted to give up and lie down and go to sleep when, suddenly, her foot hit something solid beneath the maple tree. It was one of the keelers she and her mother had placed in the woods this morning.

Elated with joy, Rachel began retracing the route she and her mother had followed. At each tree, she would stop and feel for the wooden spile which they had placed in the trees.

Then, she saw it, a candle glowing in the window.

With relief, Rachel ran the last few steps into the warmth of the log house.

It was a worried mother who gathered her little girl in her arms. Hot bean soup flavored with salt pork was simmering on the old cook stove and fresh bread was browning in the oven. The combination of scents was heavenly to Rachel's cold nose.

Mother decided to forego reading and writing lessons that day. Instead, she helped a tired daughter to a warm bed.

By the time Saturday came around, Rachel had recovered from her ordeal. The Amicks arrived early in the morning carrying baskets of food, smoked ham, eggs pink from the juice of canned red beets, pies made with canned berries, and plenty of cider for simmering on the stove.

For the next three days, only Mr. Amick went home to do his own farm chores. Otherwise, the Amicks who included Mrs. Amick, Emily, and three, strong, older brothers, carried sap into the shed where a huge fire was roaring.

The water had to evaporate in order for the sap to turn to syrup. It took 50 gallons of sap to create one gallon of syrup.

Rachel and Emily stirred until their arms ached. Just when they were beginning to wonder if the syrup was really worth this much hard work, Mrs. Amick gave them a small cup of syrup.

"Go on girls," she smiled. "You've been working hard. Go on, make some Spotza." Spotza was what happened when you poured the syrup into a dish of pure, white, snow. It was a taste treat beyond compare in those days prior to stores stuffed with chocolate.

The sap had stopped running before the Amicks packed up their belongings and their share of the syrup to head home.

No longer was it snowing in the evening. Instead, the sun, now climbing high in the sky was making every day feel a little more like spring was in the air.

It would be another season of hard work planting seeds in the ground to provide food for another winter ahead. But, Rachel knew, they would also find time for fun and friends. Life was like that on an early Pennsylvania farm.

It takes lots of stirring to make maple syrup.

All About Sweetners

Sweet tastes have always been a welcome treat.

In Rachel's day, "sweet" was a lot more difficult to achieve than it is today.

Maple syrup was used to sweeten oatmeal, baked beans, carrots, sweet potatoes, and as a sauce on pancakes.

But, because it took a lot of hard work, it had to be used sparingly.

Actually, sweeteners come from various other sources all grown on farms in some part of America.

Sugar beets are especially plentiful on Midwestern farms.

Corn is also used as a sweetener. You have probably sampled some corn syrup, used in many recipes. We grow a lot of corn in Pennsylvania, but it is even more plentiful in the Midwest.

We still make a lot of maple syrup in Pennsylvania. The states which make the most maple syrup in the United States are Vermont and Ohio.

The process for making maple syrup is still very long and a lot of hard work. Modern ways of heating and more modern methods of collecting the sap have made it a little easier.

If you have maple trees on your farm, you might ask your parents to help you tap a tree.

This is the time of year to do it.

If the doorbell rings, follow these rules.

* Be sure the door is always locked.
* Look through the window or peephole to see who's there.

* If you're expecting a delivery or repair person, have the individual slip an ID card under the door.
* If someone continues knocking, call a neighbor or the police for help.
* Don't be embarrassed when you don't let people in.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

This could be a repeat of last week's column as again I invited guests for Sunday dinner. Despite the big snow storm on Saturday, I kept hoping that someone could come to help us eat the big turkey that I stuffed and roasted. Even our son and his family could not get here for the noon meal. Although, later in the day the road was opened for the milk truck to come and empty the full tank of milk. Some people were not so lucky, and they had to dump their valuable milk.

A few months ago a reader wrote and asked me for a Pumpkin Whoopie Pie recipe as she had tasted some when she visited Lancaster County in the summer. It took a while for me to get one for her. The first one that I found came to me in a roundabout way. You see, my daughter who lives in Atlanta, Georgia visited her in-laws in Nebraska. And while there she bought a cookbook published in Kearney, Nebraska for Landis Homes Adult Day Care Center right here in Lancaster County. In fact only a few miles from my home. Later I gave the reader other recipes sent to Lancaster Farming's "Cooks Question Corner."

With this kind of winter weather, I'm sure that I'll be able to finish the red, blue, and grey braided rug that I started a few weeks ago. Some years, at this time, I would have the garden planted. Although, I find that often peas planted later catch up with those put in cold soil two weeks earlier. When the new vegetale and flower seeds that I ordered come in the mail, it makes me more anxious to get started in the garden even though I know how much hard work it will be to keep all the weeds hoed. But, I do enjoy the work outdoors.

National Dairy Board Fights False Advertising

FRESNO, Calif. — The Advertising and Sales Promotion Committee of the National Dairy Promotion and Research Board met last month to discuss action to take in challenging misleading claims made in the advertising of non-dairy products which compete for shelf space and consumers' stomachs. The Board began their work in this area by looking at the advertising of four butter substitute products.

With advice from legal counsel, the 36 dairy farmers serving on the National Dairy Board decided to first write a letter directly to the manufacturer, stating that the dairy farmers of America object to non-dairy butter substitute advertising including statements about butter or inferences that those products are natural like butter.

If manufacturers do not change their advertising, the National Dairy Board will submit a claim to the National Advertising Division (NAD) of the Better Business Bureau. Criteria for submitting a claim includes:

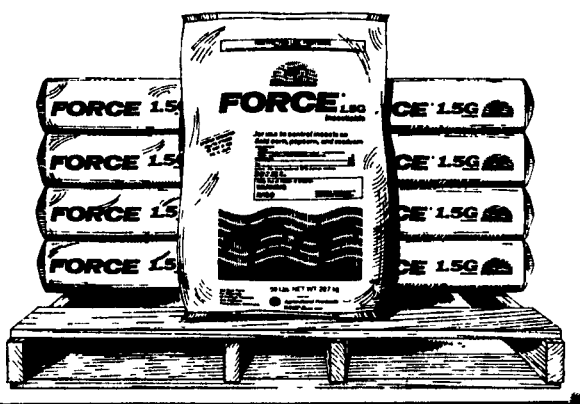
- advertising must be national;
- claims in advertising are clearly false; and
- claims in advertising are misleading.

If necessary, members of the National Dairy Board approved taking further steps to prod a change in the advertising of non-dairy substitutes. If the NAD does not rule for change in advertising, the National Dairy Board will then test one of the commercials with consumers to find their reactions and perceptions of the non-dairy butter substitute advertising.

"Since this research can cost around $15,000, the board hopes the findings can lead to a favorable ruling, which could make marketers of non-dairy products think twice before creating advertising that implies non-dairy products are as natural and great tasting as real dairy products," said Maureen Varnon, director of advertising and sales promotion for the National Dairy Board.

FORCE CONTROLS. In developing FORCE soil insecticide, ICI simulated and improved on the powerful chemistry found in chrysanthemum flowers. The result is the first pyrethroid insecticide designed for soil application.

Because of this unique chemistry, FORCE ranks low in mammalian toxicity, which means very low hazard to humans. In addition, the low water solubility and soil mobility of FORCE greatly reduces any risk of leaching or groundwater contamination.



CUTWORM APPLICATION RATES. Apply FORCE at 8 to 10 oz. per 1,000 linear row feet. The lbs./acre equivalent rates are:

6.5 lbs. per acre on 40" rows	7.7 lbs. per acre on 34" rows
6.9 lbs. per acre on 38" rows	8.2 lbs. per acre on 32" rows
7.3 lbs. per acre on 36" rows	8.7 lbs. per acre on 30" rows

FORCE may be applied in a T-band in front of the press wheels, in a band behind the press wheels, or in-furrow.

Rudy and Reba Wolgemuth are all set to take off on this combine following the wedding reception.

'Just Combined'

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

MOUNT JOY (Lancaster Co.) — The season was a bit early for harvesting, but the combine lumbering through Mount Joy streets on the night of March 20 had a special job to do.

The sign on the front of the silver Gleaner R60 warned oncoming traffic with the words: Caution: Nervous groom at wheel.

Traffic in back slowed when drivers noticed the sign in bold letters that proclaimed: Just Combined — Rudy and Reba.

The combine was the mode of transportation that farmers Rudy Wolgemuth, Elizabethtown, and Reba Brubaker, Mount Joy chose for their getaway from the church to their honeymoon.

The combine seemed the appropiate vehicle choice since the couple had spent hours of their courtship in the combine's cab as Rudy finished late night combining jobs in the area. He and his brother Eric operate a custom combining business and E&R Farms in Elizabethtown. The brothers crop farm about 1,000 acres and fatten steers, but their main job is custom combining in nine different states of the wheat belt from Texas to Idaho.

Reba is a partner on her family's dairy farm in Mount Joy. Her parents are Martin B. Arlene Brubaker and she works with her brother Doug in partnership.

The wedding and reception held at Crossroads Brethren In Christ Church, Mount Joy, incorporated much of the bridal couple's agriculture background. The cake, made by sister of the bride Rachel George of Mount Joy, had a bottom layer designed to look like a field and a replica of the Gleaner combine at work. The middle layer had confectioners' decorations of cows, milk can, and garden produce. The top had the traditional bride and groom replica.

The bridal couple made the table centerpieces, which were heart-shaped candleholders molded with grain, soybeans, barley, wheat, and corn.

The dinner for about 300 guests included vegetables and pickles that Reba had preserved from her garden.

Senior Citizen Farmers Should Reduce Risks

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Nearly 33 percent of Pennsylvania farm fatalities between 1985 and 1989 involved farmers aged 65 and older.

Unlike people in many professions, farmers often continue working into old age. Increased vulnerability to injury and illness should prompt senior farmers to reduce safety and health risks, says an expert in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences.

"If you are older, be careful not to exceed your limitations to the point that you risk injury or illness," says Dr. Dennis Murphy, professor of agricultural engineering. "Consider your age and health when deciding what you can do safely. Give up tasks that are too demanding, in the interest of your safety and that of others."

Two-thirds of Pennsylvania farm fatalities involving farmers 65 and older were tractor-related, with a large majority involving an overturn, Murphy notes. "This may support the notion that older workers lose their abilities to safely operate tractors in many specific situations."

Senior farmers should have a physical exam at least once each year. "Have your vision and hearing checked, too," Murphy suggests. "It's vital to be aware of your physical limits and not push them just to get a job done. Your life is more important than any task."

Like any other farmer, seniors should prepare for a safe day of work. "Get enough rest, have a good breakfast and choose the proper dress and footwear for the job," Murphy says. "Take work breaks to conserve and extend energy. Stop when you are tired."

Find the least taxing way of doing things to avoid undue fatigue and stress on the joints or back. "Get help rather than struggle with heavy loads and use mechanical aids when possible," says Murphy.

Many medical conditions require patients to take prescription drugs. "Many common prescriptions and even over-the-counter drugs can affect your ability to safely operate farm equipment," Murphy says.

"Ask your doctor about the effects of your prescription on job performance and driving. If you take multiple medications, be sure to ask about the effects of any possible drug interactions.

"If you're in good health, there's no reason to stop farming just because you're a senior citizen," says Murphy. "But there are many reasons to be more vigilant than ever about hazards on the farm."

Cookbook Includes Farm Wife's Prize-Winning Recipe

BETH MILLER
Adams Co. Correspondent

YORK SPRINGS (Adams Co.) — When you think about books and churches, the first things that come to mind are the Bible and the hymnal. The WillingWorkers Society of the Holy Trinity Lutheran Church in York Springs has added another book to that list.

The book they have added is the church's first cookbook.

Club members did the book to benefit the church's elevator fund. The cookbook contains 438 recipes that are sure to make your mouth water.

"We have put a lot of hours in the cookbook, but our concerns have paid off, and we have a cookbook we are really proud of," said Mary Jane Reinecker, a member of the Willing Workers.

She said about 80 people submitted recipes for the book and helped put it together.

That is a lot of volunteers for a church that has only about 300 people in its whole congregation.

Denise Horn, the wife of the church's pastor, drew the picture of the church that is seen on the cookbook's green and beige cover.

Reinecker said it took six months of work before the cookbook was ready to be sent to the printer.

However, it has been instantly popular and 500 of the 1,000 books printed have been sold since they became available in mid-December, she said.

The book sells for $8.

Many people who won't see the book will see one of its recipes because Reinecker's recipe for turkey lasagna will be in the Better Homes and Gardens magazine as one of eight winning recipes from the Young Farmer's Convention that was held recently in Des Moines, Iowa.

Mary Jane Reinecker and her family farm 400 acres and fatten 100 beef cattle near York Springs.

Mary Jane decided to enter her turkey lasagna recipe in Young Farmers' Convention contest because it is one of her own family's favorite recipes.

The recipes that won the contest were selected for their nutritional value and ease of preparation, said Reinecker.

TURKEY LASAGNA

8 ounce lasagna noodles
1 can of cream chicken soup
1 can mushroom soup
1 cup grated parmesan cheese
1 cup sour cream
1 cup chopped onions
¼ cup pimento
½ teaspoon garlic salt
2 to 3 cups turkey
2 cups shredded American cheese

Cook the noodles. Blend in the soups, parmesan cheese, sour cream and onions and stir in the turkey. Alternate layers of noodles, turkey mix and American cheese 3 times, ending with the cheese. Bake at 350 degrees for 40 to 45 minutes. Let stand 10 minutes before cutting. The recipe makes 8 servings.

The other recipes will make you hungry even though they won't make it into a magazine.

The Appetizers, Pickles and Relish section has yummies such as Cheese Wafers, Zesty Stuffed Mushrooms, and Fire and Ice Tomatoes.

The segment for Soups, Salads, Dressings and Sauces includes tasties such as Grandma Book's Cole Slaw, Health Salad, Mom's New England Macaroni Salad and Texas Hot Dog Sauce.

The chapter on Main Dishes includes recipes such as Cheeseburger Pie, Five-Decker Dinner, Swedish Cabbage Rolls, Jubilant Chicken Clam Fritters, and One Pot Pork Chop Supper.

The best part, for people who have a sweet tooth, is at the very back of the book in the Cakes, Cookies, Icings section, the Desserts chapter, and the chapter on Candy, Jelly, Jam and Preserves.

Those chapters feature goodies like Chocolate Walnut Sensations, Apricot Balls, Zoe Snyder's Spice Cake, Lemon Delight, Pavlova, Easy Grape Jelly, Virginia Sunshine Punch, Gorp, and Play Dough for Kids.

In addition to the recipes, the cookbook also contains hints on how to remove stains, a chart of weights and measures, advice on party planning, a timetable for cooking meat, an "everyday herb guide," a chart on how many calories are burned by exercise, and a funny section entitled "Parent's Glossary of Kids' Kitchen Terms."

The glossary, by the way, has a definition of a casserole that reads "Combination of favorite foods that go uneaten because they are mixed together."

To get the book, print your name and address and send it to Holy Trinity Lutheran Church, 216 Main St., P.O. Box 242, York Springs, PA, 17372. Include $8 plus $2 for postage and handling.

BUTTERMILK BRAN MUFFINS

¾ cup raw bran
1 cup buttermilk
1 egg or equivalent egg substitute
⅓ cup honey
⅓ cup vegetable oil
1 teaspoon nutmeg
½ cup raisins
½ cup shredded carrots
1¼ cup flour
1 teaspoon baking soda
¼ teaspoon salt
½ cup blueberries

Other fruit may be used instead of raisins and carrots.

Combine bran, buttermilk, beaten egg, honey, oil, raisins, and carrots in a bowl. Let stand for 10 minutes. Preheat oven to 425 degrees and lightly grease the muffin tins. In a large bowl, sift together flour, baking soda, salt, and nutmeg. Make a well in the center and add the buttermilk-bran mixture. Stir just enough to dampen the flour. The batter should be lumpy. do not overmix. Spoon batter into muffin tins, filling each ¾ full. Bake for 15 to 20 minutes or until a tester comes out clean when inserted in the center of a muffin. Recipe yields 1 dozen muffins.

FANCY TARTS
by Denise B. Horn

10 ounce package of frozen puff pastry shells
¼ cup confectioners' sugar
21 ounce can cherry pie filling
2 3-ounce packages cream cheese
½ teaspoon almond extract

Allow cream cheese to soften at room temperature. Bake shells according to the instructions on the package. Beat cream cheese, sugar, and almond extract. When shells are baked, carefully remove tops with a fork and set aside. Remove any soft stringy layers of dough inside of shells and discard. Divide cheese mixture evenly between shells. Place on baking sheet and return to oven for 5 minutes. Cool. Before serving, fill with cherry pie filling and replace pastry cap on top. Lightly sprinkle with confectioners' sugar. This serves 6.

MEXICAN DIP
Carol Geist

8 ounces cream cheese
8 ounces sour cream
8 ounce jar mild taco sauce

Assorted toppings such as chopped onion, shredded lettuce, chopped tomatoes, chopped mushrooms, chopped olives and chopped green peppers

1 large bag of corn chips for dipping

Mix cream cheese and sour cream until smooth. Spread in a 9 x 13-inch dish. Spread taco sauce on top. If you like medium or spicy foods, try medium or hot taco sauce. Sprinkle any of the assorted toppings over the sauce. Geist said her family prefers tomatoes, lettuce, onion, and olives. Refrigerate until ready to serve. Best if served the same day. Geist said her family likes corn chips as dippers.

Contest Promotes Good Nutrition

CENTERVILLE (Lancaster Co.) — A nutrition post contest to promote National Nutrition Month was recently held at Centerville Middle School. All eighth-grade students participated in designing their own poster as part of the foods and nutrition curriculum in home economics. About 300 posters were entered in the competition.

Judging the competition were Renne Alshouse, Deb Strickler, and Doris Martin. Centerville McDonald's and Good and Plenty restaurants sponsored the prizes for the competition. Many of the poster entries will be on display at the Centerville McDonald's after April 1.

Butter Sticks

8 large shredded wheat biscuits
½ cup crunchy peanut butter
3 tablespoons granulated sugar replacement
2 egg whites
1 tablespoon flour
1 tablespoon water
1 teaspoon baking powder
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
1 recipe dipping chocolate

Break biscuits into large bowl or food processor. Add peanut butter, sugar replacement, egg whites, flour, water, baking powder, and vanilla. Work until mixture is completely blended. Mixture will be sticky. Form into 16 sticks. Place on ungreased cookie sheet. Bake at 400 degrees for 10 minutes or until surface feels hard. Remove. Cool slightly. Dip in chocolate. Yield: 16 sticks; 115 calories per stick.

Semi Sweet Dipping Chocolate
Low calorie

1 cup nonfat dry milk powder
⅓ cup cocoa
2 tablespoons parafin wax
½ cup water
1 tablespoon vegetable oil
1 tablespoon liquid sugar replacement

Combine dry milk, cocoa, and wax in blender or food processor. Blend to soft powder. Pour into top of double boiler. Add water, stir to blend. Add vegetable oil. Place over hot (not boiling) water and cook and stir until pieces are completely dissolved and mixture is thick, smooth, and creamy. Remove from heat. Stir in sugar replacement. Let cool slightly. Dip candies according to recipe. Shake off excess chocolate. Place on very lightly greased waxed paper and allow to cool completely. (If candies won't come off paper easily, slightly warm waxed paper). Store in cool place. Yields: 1 cup with 427 calories.

MIRACLE WHIP CHOCOLATE CAKE

Sift:
2 cups flour
4 tablespoons cocoa
2 teaspoons baking soda

Soak:
1 cup dried apricots in hot water. Puree.

Mix:
1 cup Kraft-free salad dressing
1 cup cold coffee
2 teaspoons vanilla

Add apricots and dry ingredients. Beat 3 minutes. Pour into 8x8-inch square pan sprayed with vegetable spray. Bake at 350 degrees about 30 minutes or until done.

Note: 1 cup prunes, soaked and pureed or 1 cup diced apples may be substituted for apricots. If you don't want to use fruit, substitute 1 cup artificial sweetener.

Orange Chiffon Cheesecake

Crust:
2 cups graham cracker crumbs
1 stick diet margarine, melted

Spray 9-inch springform pan or pie pan with vegetable spray. Blend crust ingredients thoroughly and press over bottom and halfway up sides of pan. Bake at 350 degrees for 8 to 10 minutes or until set. Cool.

Filling:
1 cup orange juice
1 envelope unflavored gelatin
12 ounces low-cal cream cheese, soft
1 cup part-skim ricotta
12 packages sugar substitute
1 small container light whipped topping
2 medium oranges, peeled, seeded or chopped OR 1 can mandarin oranges, drained

Pour orange juice in small saucepan. Sprinkle gelatin over juice and let soften 1 minute. Heat, stirring constantly until gelatin dissolves (about 3 minutes). Blend cream cheese and ricotta in large bowl until smooth. Stir in sugar substitute; add gelatin mixture and beat until smooth. Fold thawed whipped topping into cheese mixture. Stir in oranges. Spoon into crust. Spread evenly. Chill 6 hours or overnight. Garnish with orange sections. Makes 16 servings with 149 calories each.

Hershey Helps Promote Ice Cream

ARLINGTON, Va. — The National Dairy Board has teamed up with Hershey again to promote ice cream and toppings. This is a new joint venture with Hershey's, aimed at the food service channel, commercial (for example, restaurant) and non-commercial (such as hospital cafeteria) operators. Last summer, Hershey was a partner with UDIA and the National Dairy Board in an ice cream and toppings promotion targeting retail consumers.

The objective of the promotion is to gain market visibility with brokers/distributors, restaurant operators and ultimately consumers to stimulate consumption of ice cream sundaes. To do this, the promotion will provide frozen dairy menu ideas and serving suggestions.

Hershey created a two-page print advertisement and a recipe brochure for this promotion. The company is sponsoring a recipe contest for food service personnel.

The National Dairy Board will pay up to $52,000 to run the ad six times in trade magazines like Restaurants & Institutions. Hershey is funding the promotion at $3 to each dairy farmer dollar contributed.

On March 1 20 members and three guests attended the Berks County Farm Women executive board meeting held in the agriculture building. Members answered the roll call question, "Where did you go on your first date with your husband to be?"

President Fern Phillipy opened the meeting, followed with devotions by Joanne Stockholm of Group #10, reading Psalm 100, also a poem "Morning Glory" and The Lords Prayer and flag salute.

Janet Schlegel reported she has accepted a position on the agriculture committee with Tim Holden. She reminded members that food items for The Greater Berks Food Bank shall be given to group presidents for delivery.

Berks Heim Bingo on April 8 at the main building; each group furnishing an angel food cake. On April 21, at 6 p.m. will be the Berks Heim Volunteer service banquet at the agriculture building. Berks County Farm Women are donating the 24 centerpieces. President Phillipy, a member of the volunteer board, reported 12 dozen robes had been purchased and some keyboards last year. The Board is considering buying tables and room dividers for the dining rooms to help make the Heim atmosphere more "Homey."

President Phillipy reported members had a 100% participation in both caring and sharing and safety programs; receiving certificates at the state convention, also a certificate for an increase in membership.

Betty Sattazahn gave a report on the county convention progress, which will be held at the agriculture center this year with a ham and stuffed chicken breast dinner. The quilt for the county project is waiting to be quilted. Please contact Fern Phillipy if you would like to volunteer your quilting talent.

The next executive board meeting is May 3, at 8 p.m. at the agriculture building.

Lancaster Society 1

President Fay Garman presided.

Meeting opened by members singing two songs led by Martha Jane Brubaker and devotions by Dorothy Rutbell.

Sixteen members responded to roll call by naming their favorite dessert.

Viola Wolf introduced guest speaker, Doris Thomas, from the Lancaster Extension Service. The program was titled "Eating HEART-ily" and the speaker focused her remarks on this theme. She emphasized the importance of reducing fats in one's diet and offered some very valuable tips on how to do so.

Two delegates, Julia Zahn and Viola Wolf, reported on the State Farm Women's Convention. Joan Hershey was the speaker for this year. The state would like a new banner and it was suggested that one of our members, Hazel Ulrich, help with this project. President Fay Garman announced that the sale of the State Farm Women's cook book amounted to $27,000.

The Lancaster County Farm Women's project for this year will be an elevator for the Farm & Home building in Lancaster.

The next meeting for Society No. 1 will be held on April 3 at 1:15 p.m. at Brethren Village with Rachel Bollinger as hostess and Harriet Fasnacht, Dorothy Hollinger and Ruth Rutbell as co-hostesses. Members of Society No. 35 will be the guests for this meeting.

At noon time a very delicious covered dish dinner was enjoyed. Following the dinner Jean Ressel, vice president, presided at the business meeting in the absence of the president. For the devotions, Vera read the 103rd Psalm followed by praying the Lord's Prayer. In answer to the roll call each person was to wear something green or be fined 25¢.

A favorable report was given for serving the A. L. Herr Company luncheon. Reports were given by the delegates who attended the State Farm Women Convention in Harrisburg in January. The three charities chosen to take to the County meeting were the Red Cross, Hospice, and repairing the Farm Home kitchen. The cook books have all been sold and the Sunshine Committee reported 4 cards and 1 bouquet sent.

Consumers Hear That People Like Milk, It Shows

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Consumers across the state are hearing that people like milk and "It Shows." This new advertising program in Pennsylvania is part of a national fluid milk campaign designed to reach adult milk drinkers. Two new commercials are part of a unified advertising program, nationally sponsored by the National Dairy Board, United Dairy Industry Association, and regional promotion programs throughout the country. In Pennsylvania, this program has been supported and extended by the Dairy Promotion Partners.

The Partner organizations, American Dairy Association and Dairy Council, Mid East UDIA/F.O. 36 Advertising and Promotion Agency, and the Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program, have extended the national campaign of 20 weeks to a total of 32 weeks of fluid milk advertising in Pennsylvania. In addition, the Partners are sponsoring radio advertising over the total 32-week period.

The results from extensive research of fluid milk drinkers were used to create the new unified advertising campaign. The study showed that heavy and moderate milk drinkers, ages 18 and over, were the best target audience for milk advertising. This audience incorporates both men and women, along with various ethnic groups. These television viewers offer the dairy industry three opportunities to increase milk sales, through: the sheer size of the group; the volume of milk consumed by this group; and the potential for group members to impact children's milk consumption.

Within Pennsylvania, the Partners have targeted five markets - Altoona/Johnstown, Erie, Harrisburg/Lancaster/Lebanon/York, Pittsburgh, and Wilkes-Barre/Scranton. The campaign includes network television and radio in these markets. In addition, the schedule includes three weeks of ice cream television and radio advertising.

The fluid milk campaign is tilted "It Shows" and features two commercials - "She Shows" and "He Shows." The new commercials build on the "Milk It Does A Body Good" theme and show how milk's nutritional benefits ... Vitamin A for bright eyes, calcium for strong bones ... help adults of all ages look and feel their best.

On radio, two 60-second commercials, "Feel Good" and "Healthy and Happy," reinforce the message that "when you drink milk, it shows." These messages complement the television commercials with upbeat music and an announcer who reminds consumers about milk's benefits - calcium, protein, and vitamin A.

Dairy farmers looking for these new, exciting commercials should be watching the evening news and prime time television programs in their area. The unified advertising plan has a strong emphasis on buying network television while local units purchase spot advertising to extend these efforts. Nationally, the campaign will be seen on highly rated evenings for various networks. This includes the CBS network's top line-up on Monday evenings and NBC's lineup on Thursday evenings. Television shows like "LA Law," "Northern Exposure," and major television movies will feature milk commercials. National network evening news programs will also feature milk messages and sponsorships.

Top radio stations in the state have been targeted for fluid milk advertising. These stations are selected to complement television advertising. Milk advertising airs primarily on weekday drivetime as well as during the weekend. The Partners have also negotiated for special milk promotions on radio stations participating in the campaign. These include events at ski lodges and activities at parks.

In total, the unified advertising plan offers dairy farmers a 20% more efficient advertising program throughout the country. In Pennsylvania, this efficiency is even greater due to the cooperative work by the Dairy Promotion Partners.

ADC Meets Farmers' Needs
More Than $129 Million in Extra Payments

"At Atlantic Dairy Cooperative, our mission is to maximize returns to members. In the past six years, we returned more than $129 million to members in equity payments, over-order premiums and quality bonuses. That's an average of $36,600 per member. And these extra dollars are continuing at the rate of $1.7 million a month.

Robert B. McSparran
President

"When non-members ask me why they should belong to Atlantic Dairy Cooperative, I am happy to report that we are financially healthy, strong in membership and growing in sales. ADC is the region's largest and most fiscally-sound cooperative, with a guaranteed market and outstanding benefits.

"More dairy farmers joined us last year than at any time in the past decade. If you are not an ADC shipper and are worried about your own milk market, then you should talk to the cooperative that is facing the future with confidence."

How To Replace Window Screens

Now may be a good time to repair or replace window and door screens. Peter Miranda, executive director of the Insect Screening Weavers Association, points out that screens not only are a home's first line of defense against flying insects, they also are important in natural ventilation—helping keep down air conditioning bills—and with proper upkeep, can make a home more attractive.

Here are some tips from the Association to help keep your repair or replacement of window screens simple.

Replacing Screens Inexpensive, Easy

"There are two popular types of screening, aluminum and fiber glass," Mr. Miranda says. "Both are corrosion resistant—unlike old galvanized steel screens—and inexpensive.

"And, even if you are all thumbs around the house, it is easy to replace old, worn-out screens, or make new ones, using common household tools and some inexpensive materials."

All you need to put new aluminum or fiber glass screens on existing frames is a new piece of screening, a screwdriver, utility knife or tin snips, concave hand roller tool and vinyl-coated replacement spline. Spline is the rubbery strip that anchors screening to the frame: the hand roller is a special tool used to install spline.

Easy Installation

After gathering the materials, your first step in replacing screening in an aluminum frame for a single or double-hung window is removal of the old screening. Lay the screen on a flat surface, with the spline channel up, and use a screwdriver to start pulling out the spline.

Next, place the new screening on the frame, with a 1-in. overlap around the sides. Then, starting at any corner of the frame, use the concave hand roller to secure the screening and spline in the channel, making sure the screening is taut completely around the frame. To finish, just trim off the excess screening and the repaired screen is ready to install.

If you are working with wood frames, you will need a workbench, wood blocks and two C-clamps to make sure the screening is taut.

Start by removing the molding over the spline channel, if one is present. This should be done carefully, with a wide chisel or putty knife. Next, detach the old screening as you would with an aluminum frame and cut a new piece slightly larger than the area to be covered. Staple or tack the new screening to one end of the frame and place the frame on the workbench with 2 X 4 in. wood blocks under each end. Fasten the C-clamp along each side of the screen to bow the frame, then pull the screening taut and tack down the second end.

After the ends are secured, remove the clamps and blocks and use new spline and the concave roller to fasten the screen. If the screen has a center rail, put it back on, then just trim off the excess screening and replace the decorative molding.

If you find that the wooden frames are weakening with age, a little preventive repair can help stretch their life. To straighten and stiffen weakened corners, try screwing L-shaped metal braces on each side of the frame. If either wood or metal screens are bent out of shape, though, the best bet is to buy or build new frames.

Screen Doors For Full Benefit

When checking window screens, be sure not to overlook front and back door screens. And, of course, homeowners with sliding screen doors should pay extra attention to the door tracks. Any kinks in the bottom track should be straightened to help the doors roll smoothly.

"Ventilating your home naturally by making full use of window and door screens improves air circulation, making the home more comfortable and reducing electric bills for homeowners with air conditioning," Mr. Miranda says.

"Home handymen can buy standard-mesh aluminum or fiber glass screening at hardware stores and home supply centers, along with replacement spline and hand-rollers," he continues. "Rolls of screening are generally available in widths up to 84 in. and often can be cut to order, so be sure to have the measurements of the screens you need to replace."

Mr. Miranda also notes that many rescreening packages are offered with easy do-it-yourself instructions.

"If you are still not convinced it's easy to replace old screens," he says, "you can call a local screening dealer for installation service. They are usually listed in the Yellow Pages under 'Screens—Door and Window' and can meet all your home screening needs."

Teens Learn Business Skills

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — More than 300 adults and young people from 22 states, Puerto Rico, and the District of Columbia attended a recent Youth in Business Symposium sponsored by the Cooperative Extension Service-Maryland Institute for Agriculture and Natural Resources and the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development.

Held at the Hyatt Regency Hotel at Baltimore's Inner Harbor, the symposium was attended by teen entrepreneurs, young people interested in starting their own businesses, and adult leaders who assist in these efforts.

Participants attended seminar sessions on such subjects as "The Principles of Strategic Business Planning," "Making Money Legally Catches Youths' Eyes," "Teen Mothers in the Work Place: Tomorrow's Entrepreneurs," and "Venture Feasibility and Market Analysis." They learned how to prepare a business plan, sell their ideas, overcome obstacles, secure financial backing and manage a small business.

Representatives from government agencies, foundations and the academic and business communities participated in special forums and discussed successful youth entrepreneurship model programs. Several of these programs — including 4-H Learn and Earn, the SouthEast Teens (SET) for Success Teen Enterprise Program, Launching Entrepreneurs into Action (LEAP), and the Paquin School's Young Sensations — focus on the needs of Baltimore youth.

A panel of successful teen entrepreneurs talked about their business ventures and answered questions. One panelist, James McNeal, a 20-year-old from Pennsylvania, mamages RAP groups. An entrepreneur since he was 10, McNeal encouraged successful entrepreneurs to become mentors and role models. Panel moderator Adrienne Sheaffer has a thriving floral arrangement business in Maryland. Started with a $50 investment when she was in high school, the business grossed $38,000 last year.

Luncheon speakers Nancy Flake and Charles Reid gave symposium participants some food for thought. Flake, director of the Howard University Small Business Development Center, outlined the requirements involved in becoming an entrepreneur and told young people to "be prepared to do business the way business is done."

Reid, director of diversity for Kraft General Foods, Inc., explained the three elements of success — ability, breaks, and courage — and emphasized the importance of excellence.

"Without it," he said, "you're just one of many people trying to get ahead."

Thirty-five adult leaders from across the country held a brainstorming session at the symposium and decided to establish a national network to promote and support youth entrepreneurship. Bill Clark, extension 4-H agent in Baltimore, will spearhead coalition building efforts.

4-H HAPPENINGS

Rough Riders 4-H

The March meeting of the Rough Riders 4-H Horse and Pony Club was held at Kroener's on March 11 at 7 p.m.

Each committee reported on their activities in the month of February, and teen leaders reported on their first meeting with their groups.

Tina Henry did a demonstration on bandaging.

Club members of the month were Gabriel Bowman and Dallassa Bowman.

Gabriel, 12, has been a Rough Riders member for three years. This year, he is club president, as well as a teen leader. A 6-year-old gray Quarter Horse named Blue is his project horse. Together, they like to trail ride and jump.

Dallassa, 11, has been a Rough Riders member for three years, serving this year on the Trail Riding Committee. Cupid, a 5-year-old Paint, is her project horse. Together, they enjoy dressage and jumping.

Dauphin County 4-H Seeing Eye Puppy Club

The Dauphin County 4-H Seeing Eye Puppy Club meets the second Thursday of every month at 7 p.m. at the Agricultural Building located at 1451 Peter's Mtn. Road, Dauphin. The club will be meeting April 15 because of the Easter holiday. Anyone interested is welcome to join in the meetings.

Seven puppies are in the club. There are four German Shepherds, two yellow labradors, and one chocolate labrador.

The puppies range in age from two months to one year old. The club gets the puppy when it is about two months old. When the puppies are about 14 months old, they are returned to the Seeing Eye, and the club receives a new puppy.

From the time the club gets the puppy, they begin socializing him. That is, bringing him to stores, malls, churches, and of course to monthly meetings. In addition to these places, the 4-H club has one outing a month in which the puppies and the 4-H'ers take the puppies out.

In January the club went to the Farm Show and displayed dogs. Later that month the club also attended the Extended Care Unit of the Polyclinic Hospital and allowed the patients to meet the puppies.

In March the club was planning to go to Chocolate World to tour the facilities and display the dogs; however, this was canceled due to the weather. In April the club is planning to go to the Colonial Park Mall with their dogs to further experience them.

All of the puppies are very gentle and can be petted by anyone. However, if you see a dog with a harness on, it may not be petted since it is guiding a blind person. The club's puppies can be easily recognized since they are usually wearing a green handkerchief around their necks.

This project is very rewarding for blind people as well as the 4-H'ers. The 4-H'ers get the satisfaction of knowing that the puppy they raised is now giving a blind person almost total independence.

If you would like to meet the puppies: Garbo, Hank, Vasco, Dakota, Lewis, Jamie, and Lincoln, please plan to attend club meetings or contact Cathy Yingst 4-H leader, at (717) 599-5917.

PENNSYLVANIA'S PSEUDORABIES CONTROL PROGRAM

Dr. Paul M. Pitcher
Dr. Amy J. Nesselrodt
Federal Veterinarians

Pennsylvania has been under pressure by the National Pseudorabies Advisory Committee and neighboring states to increase efforts to eliminate pseudorabies (PR) from its swine herds.

To respond to this pressure, we have attempted to meet with the owners of all quarantined herds. Our objective has been to work with each herd owner to develop a plan to eliminate PR from his herd.

The mechanics of herd plan development was discussed in this column in the February 20 issue of Lancaster Farming. To date, we have been successful in implementing herd plans in more than 90 percent of the herds quarantined for PR in Pennsylvania.

In general, owners of quarantined herds have been cooperative. They recognize that, to make cleanup efforts successful, everyone needs to work together so that entire neighborhoods can progress toward eliminating PR.

Sometimes herd owners are reluctant to cooperate because of perceptions that their neighbors are not doing anything to control the disease. This charge is usually inaccurate. Virtually all of the quarantined breeding herds are regularly vaccinating for PR and monitoring their progress toward cleanup by blood testing. Many of the feeder pigs are vaccinated prior to placement on finish floors.

Feed mills which contract individual producers to produce feeder pigs or to feed out fat hogs are supportive of the program and are doing what they can to control the spread of PR.

Some producers believe that efforts to eliminate PR are futile. These prophesies tend to be self-fulfilling. Ohio progressed from having more than 150 infected herds a few years ago to about 30 today. In Pennsylvania, several of our top managers have been very successful in controlling PR and rapidly eliminating it from their herds by intensive vaccination and segregation of animals. We find that, if the herd manager is determined to eliminate the disease and committed to principles of high health, rapid progress is possible.

As a result of herd plan activity, Pennsylvania advanced to Stage II of the National Pseudorabies Eradication Program in November 1992. Stage II is the Control stage, where the effort is to identify all herds infected with PR and begin cleanup activity in those herds.

It is only fair that the efforts of owners of quarantined herds are rewarded with greater assurance that they will not be reinfected from a neighboring herd that is unaware of its PR status. We have identified more than 200 herds which have at least one quarantined herd within 2 miles and have not been tested for PR. All of these herds will need to be tested in the near future. This testing can be conducted at state expense and will initially qualify the herd to obtain PR vaccine or to be classified as Feeder Pig Monitored. Only Feeder Pig Monitored herds are allowed to sell feeder pigs at commercial markets.

If you have questions regarding the Pennsylvania Pseudorabies Control Program or the requirements of Stage II, please call us at the USDA office, (717) 782-3442. We will serve as your advocate to the Pennsylvania PR Advisory Board, which meets every two months and has primary responsibility for formulating policy.

Our foremost goal is to make the program work for all producers, so let us know what you need. We cannot respond to your needs unless we hear from you.

Please try to promptly complete the required testing when you are requested to do so by the Pennsylvania Bureau of Animal Industry. Uniform cooperation will ensure that Pennsylvania producers are relieved of the burden of production losses caused by PR.

Career Opportunities Abound

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — The recent increase in public concern about dietary fat and cholesterol has helped fuel a growth in the consumption of poultry meat. As the poultry industry has grown, so has its need for qualified college graduates to fill a wide range of jobs.

"A continuous supply of properly trained young people is required to fill many production, supervisory, management and technical positions," said Dr. William Weaver, professor and head of poultry science in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences. "Unfortunately, the needs of the industry have far outstripped the availability of graduates trained in poultry science."

Poultry meat is the number one meat consumed in the U.S., with per capita consumption topping 90 pounds annually. Several of the large broiler companies produce more than $1 billion per year in sales.

Segments of the egg industry also have grown rapidly. Although per capita consumption of whole eggs has fallen, the sale of processed egg products has risen as much as 18 percent annually. "Eggs are likely to be marketed very differently in the future," said Weaver. "Some industry observers estimate that 35 to 60 percent of eggs produced by the year 2000 will be sold as processed items and not as shell eggs,"

Weaver said these industry trends create a demand for a workforce with a variety of skills."Students entering the poultry industry today must understand and be trained in disciplines such as business manageemnt, finance, business and agricultural law and international trade," he said. "They must have good interpersonal and communication skills. And they still need a good working knowledge of poultry science and the different aspects of the poultry industry."

The undergraduate curriculum in Penn State's poultry science department is undergoing major changes to ensure that appropriate courses are being offered. "Several poultry courses in our department are being updated," Weaver said, "and others taught outside the department are being added to give students the tools they need to become industry leaders in the next century."

FARM MANAGEMENT

CAN YOU AFFORD TO FARM?

Cash Flow Budgets

Do you really know what standard of living your farm business can provide you? If not, then prepare a farm cash flow projection to find out.

Cash management is the use of cash flow budgets and cash flow statements to measure and project the movement of cash, personal and business, in and out of your business. An accurate cash flow will reveal a plan's financial feasibility.

Why Do It?

Why should you take time to figure out a cash flow budget and/or cash flow statement? Because the more control you have over your cash flow, the more profitable your business will be.

A dozen other reasons to create your cash flow projection are to:

- Show the seasonal timing of cash in and out of the business.
- Show lenders the loan repayment capacity of your business, especially in times of transition.
- Reveal if there is enough cash from the business to support an investment in capital, or should borrowed funds be used.
- Measure your farm business' ability to meet its obligations, such as cash expenses, debt repayment, taxes, family living and capital investments (equipment, machinery, and breeding livestock).
- Determine the timing and limit for your line of credit.
- Act as a budgeting aide to limit personal and farm expenses. Don't just spend until the income is gone.
- Reveal the farm business's ability to support family living requirements.
- Reveal if there is enough cash being generated to maintain or increase the capital assets.
- Compare to prior year's statements to reveal management problems.
- Help in formulating your marketing plan, so income matches expenses.
- Meet a requirement of a first-time borrower.
- Provide information about the liquidity of the farm.

What Is It?

A cash flow statement measures the liquidity of a farm business. Liquidity is a measure to see if a farm business is generating enough cash from normal operations to meet all obligations of the business, i.e., cash expenses, debt repayment, taxes, family living, and capital investments (equipment, machinery, breeding livestock).

The cash flow statement is very helpful as a financial analysis tool when used with the income statement and balance sheet to determine total financial health.

Cash Flow Vs. Profitability

Accounts such as inventory, accounts payable and receivable, and depreciation — used to calculate a farm's profitability — are not used in a true cash flow projection. That is why a farm that easily pays its bills may not be very profitable.

Bills Get Paid But No Profit

The profit and loss statement may indicate the farm business is generating little or no profit but there is still no problem.

Paying bills in a timely manner. The following are six scenarios where the farm isn't profitable but the bills are paid in a timely fashion:

1. Little or no debt, so no principal payments are to be made from cash income.
2. Increasing debt, line of credit, or payables. Your farm venders or bank is paying your cash operating expenses.
3. Living off inventories. Inventory sales creates cash flow, but your spending the prior year's profits.
4. Living off depreciation. Tax depreciation exceeds new capital investments and principal payments. A day of reckoning comes when the machinery wears out.
5. Low family withdrawals.
6. Living expenses provided by off-farm wages.

Profitable, But Bills Don't Get Paid

The income statement (profit and loss statement) may indicate the farm business is generating a reasonable profit, but there is still a cash problem. How can that be?

1. Fast farm growth. Inventories are growing along with net worth, but these inventories are not generating any income.
2. Rapid paydown of debt. Principal payments greatly exceed depreciation, and the majority of debt is short term.
3. Large family withdrawals. Family living exceeds farm profits — either large unexpected family expenses or not living within the budget.
4. Unusual conditions. High inventory prices, or high crop yields, but crops were not sold by years end.
5. High income and social security taxes. Taxes come due the same time as spring crop expenses.

Monthly Cash Flow Budgets

The cash flow budget most commonly used by farmers is the yearly budget broken down by month. The cash flow budget looks like a calendar with income and expense categories that projects each month's cash inflow and outflow from business operations, personal sources, financing activities (new loans and repayments), investments in capital assets, and family living.

For Example:

April shows a cash deficit of $3,000.

The money could be invested, short term, at 4 percent interest for 90 days and gain $30 interest. It will then be used during the April cash deficit time avoiding possible financing and adding $30 to the cash inflow.

Thirty dollars does not seem like a lot of money, but it will add up when this might be done several times throughout the year, especially if the amount is larger than $3,000. The cash flow budget adds to the timeliness of the farm business and improves efficiency in cash management.

Just Do It!

I strongly suggest that you take time to prepare and analyze a cash flow budget as well as a cash flow statement for your farm business.

By annually creating a cash flow projection and then comparing that projection to the actual results, you will be able to set realistic debt repayment, capital purchase, and family withdrawal goals for your farm.

You will establish the standard of living your farm can afford your family.

Winter Convention

WINAMAC, Ind. — The International Harvester Collectors Club, a not-forprofit organization, was formed here in July 1990 to preserve the history of International Harvester Co.

The club started with 200 members in July of 1990 and now has more than 2,300 members and growing strong. The second annual meeting was held at Edgerton, Wis. in September 1991 and the third annual meeting was held in June of 1992 at Marion, Ohio.

The fourth meeting will be held this year at the Missouri River Valley Steam Engine Show at Booneville, Mo. on Sept. 9-12. Plans are to make this display the largest gathering of International Harvester Equipment, tractors, and memorabilia in the country.

The International Harvester Collector Club held their first annual winter convention at the Hollidome Holiday Inn in Elgin, Ill. Feb. 26-28. It was sponsored by the Illinois Chapter #2 of the club. The meeting was attended by approximately 1,000 people and 30 vender tables with I H parts, toys, literature, and memorabilia.

Several I H retirees attended the convention, demonstrations, and the evening buffet banquet. There were buses that took the ladies to several shopping malls, pottery shop, and craft displays, which were well attended.

For more information of the club, contact Clyde Berkshire, Box 237, Royal Center, IN 46978, (219) 643-3115, or write the International Harvester Collectors, R.R.2, Box 286, Winamac, IN 46996.

EXCESS POULTRY MANURE?

Robert E. Graves
Professor of Agricultural Engineering

Poultry manure that cannot be spread on nearby crop fields is a problem. In addition to its bulk and moisture content, it can be a nuisance, causing odor, fly, and rodent problems. Composting is an alternative that will help utilize poultry manure. Composted manure is drier and has little odor and less volume than "raw" manure.

Compost is produced when rich organic materials, such as poultry manure, are aerobically decomposed, or aged. This process, called composting, results in a stable, reasonably inoffensive, humus-like material.

The primary ingredients necessary for successful composting are carbon, nitrogen, moisture, air, and enough material to allow heat buildup in the compost pile or vessel. Parameters usually given for successful composting are:

Carbon/Nitrogen ratio - 20:1-40:1; Moisture - 40-65%; Temperature - 110-150 degrees Fahrenheit; Particle size - 1/8 - 1/12" to provide a loose fluffy pile.

Poultry manure can vary from high-nitrogen, wet cage layer manure to low-nitrogen, dry-caked broiler litter. Like most farm manures, it requires the addition of a carbonaceous bulking agent such as wood chips, sawdust, straw, or cornstalks. This material acts both to provide additional carbon and to increase pore space in the pile. Waste paper, cardboard and kraft bags, while they offer little structure, can be used as a carbon source.

As microorganisms begin breaking down organic material, they generate heat. Heat is lost through the sides of the pile and in air that flows through the pile to provide oxygen for the bugs to live and work.

The activity of the bugs can be determined by monitoring pile temperature. Monitoring temperature daily and comparing it with temperatures from previous days will give an idea of what is happening.

Under ideal conditions, the temperature will rise very rapidly in the first few days and then stabilize around 140 degrees for 2 to 4 weeks. A gradual decline in temperature may indicate that the pile is becoming less active. Temperatures will also go down if the bugs have run out of air, the pile has become too dry, or there is not enough material to decompose.

Increasing aeration with blowers or by mixing and stirring the pile should cause temperatures to rise again. If the pile is too dry, water must be added to help bugs break down large organic particles. If a pile is poorly mixed, the carbon and nitrogen sources may not be close enough together for the bugs to utilize both. In this case some bugs will get a diet rich in nitrogen while other bugs will get a diet too rich in carbon.

Growing composting bugs is like raising chickens: You need the right conditions. Under conditions of high activity and low air supply, the bugs can get too hot and start to die off. To help control excess heat, increase aeration.

It's easy to get started composting poultry manure. All you need is a reasonably dry site away from runoff, a front end loader, some dry carbonaceous material to mix with the manure, and time and interest. A good-sized truck load of manure should make a large enough pile to contain heat. Mix the poultry manure and bulking agent until you get a material with the consistency of damp silage or wet hay. Do not drive on or into the pile, rather shake the material out of the bucket onto the pile so it stays fluffy. After three or four days, dig into the pile; if steam emerges, things are working. If you get a strong ammonia smell, you have not added enough carbon.

Turn the pile and check it again in a few days. A thermometer that can measure temperatures 1-3 feet into the pile is helpful. To compost large amounts of material regularly, you need to develop an environmentally sound composting area and may wish to use a compost windrow turner. Or you may decide to invest in an aerated static pile or bunker-type facility.

Three fact sheets about composting are available from your county Penn State Cooperative Extension office, or write to me, Dr. Bob Graves, 244 Agricultural Engineering Building, University Park, PA 16802-1909.

Beef Briefs

ON BULLS AND GATES

As I write this, the Pennsylvania Performance Tested Bull Sale is just a few days away.

We have discussed may times the tremendous influence that bull selection has on progress and profitability in the beef herd. One other thing that may be just as important to success is when not to use the bull.

It is, of course, important to open the gate for the bull at the most appropriate time in the spring or early summer, but it even more important to know when to close that gate. Defined breeding and calving seasons are essential to effective management of a cow herd.

Some of the factors affected by planning the calving season include nutritional, health, calving, and marketing management.

The nutritional needs of a cow herd are dynamic; that is, they change throughout the year. We should not expect to feed a cow the same thing 6 months before calving as we would just after calving. Trying to do so would result in either a waste of feed or a loss of production. Feed needs are based on the productive status of the cow and not what the date is on the calendar.

By defining and limiting the calving season, we can more closely use feed resources to their best advantage, and, at the same time, simplify the nutritional management of the herd. For example, when there is a spread in calving dates in a herd of five months, this implies there are cows in early lactation and cows that are still in mid-pregnancy.

The protein needs of the former group may be twice what they are for the dry cows, and the energy needs are about 20 percent greater. Failure to feed the cows with young calves even the 3 pounds of additional TDN they need can result in up to 10 pounds less daily milk production. With all of the cows in a 60-day calving window, they can all be fed the same way and therefore reduce the hassle of separating cows.

A good health management program, including both vaccinations and deworming, can be planned and implemented easier when all of the cows can be treated the same way on the same day. This is best accomplished when all of the cows are at a similar period of reproduction. Again, particularly for spring vaccinations for the reproductive problems vibrio and lepto, it only makes sense to gather and send the cows through the chute on one day. More effective health management will result.

Since most of the cow-calf herds in the region are part-time enterprises and the managers have other jobs, calving management can suffer when calving is strung out over a long period. Defining and limiting the calving season will condense the management needs at calving. This will result in better planning of time and people, more live calves going over the scales, and more dollars returned to the enterprise.

Finally, we have a real marketing deficiency in the region because of herd size. Truck load lots of uniform calves are usually worth more on the market. Calves from a herd that vary in weight by as much as 200 pounds are commonly seen simply because of differences in age. This kind of variation is easily eliminated by better planning of the calving season.

How long should calving last? This question can only be answered on an individual basis. In most cases a calving season of 60 days will be manageable for most breeders. Some of the questions you should ask include: Do you have enough bull power to logically get all of the cows bred in a short period of time? This implies there should be no more than 15 cows per yearling bull, 25 cows per 2-and 3-yr old bull, and 45 cows per mature bull.

Do you have the necessary feed resources to get cows cycling within 90 days after calving? Young and/or heavy milking cows have a tremendous energy drain in the first 8 weeks after calving, and it will be necessary to do a good job of feeding cows to be sure they are capable of cycling on time.

Is the general health of the herd in good shape? There are many kinds of "bugs" and worms that can seriously effect reproduction in a herd. A sound, well maintained health program is essential to success in limited calving seasons.

Are you prepared to reduce the time involved in calving management to a shorter, more intensive period? You may be used to having a calf arrive every other day for several months. Do you have the time needed to handle several calves a day?

The first step in better organization of a cow herd is defined calving seasons. Remember to shut the gate, too.

Real Good Timing

The recent storm in the Northeast arrived at just the right time — the right time to kill a lot of calves. I have heard of more losses this year than at any time I can remember.

We may not have seen the end of the trouble from the storm, either. Many producers have had trouble from calf scours and poor feed being available because they simply cannot get to their better feed. The result may be some cows that do not get bred on time this year. This makes it doubly important to get some condition on the cows as quickly as possible.

Sheep Industry Calls Meeting To Tackle Wool Problem

DENVER, Colo. — In an effort to combat the polyproylene-in-wool problem aggressively, the Americam Sheep Industry Association's Wool Council and Production Education and Research Council have teamed to sponsored a polypropylene summit meeting.

The meeting, which has not yet been finalized, will include producers, wool merchandisers, mill manufacturers, hay producers, bale equipment, and polypropylene manufacturers, and other natural fiber representatives. The initial effort is to create an awareness of the polypropylene problem in the United States sheep industry and to develop a dialogue and cooperative effort involving all segments of the wool and allied industries associated with the issue.

"In our efforts to clean up the clip, we won't just be talking to producers," said Gene Brune, president of the American Sheep Industry Association. "We will be looking for ways to negotiate with some of the manufacturers and users of poly to see if feasible alternatives can be found.

"Poly is not a problem we can solve today," he said. "But we can continue to educate producers not to use poly around their operations or feed hay baled with polypropylene twine. The effort today is a long-term commitment to overcome a problem we know is critical to textile manufacturers."

Wool contaminated with polypropylene has been a serious problem for years and has caused the sheep industry millions of dollars in lost revenue because of discounted product and extra labor costs to handle contaminated fabric.

AGCO Offers Powershift Transmission In 9600 Series

KANSAS CITY, MO. — AGCO Corporation unveiled a revolutionary 18-speed full powershift transmission in its newly designed line of 9600 Series high-horsepower tractors. The introduction was held at the first of two meetings scheduled for its AGCO Allis dealers in Kansas City.

"According to many of our dealers, loyal owners of the popular 8000 Series Allis-Chalmers powershift tractors have been eagerly anticipating the introduction of this new line of tractors," said John M. Shumejda, executive vice president and chief operating officer of AGCO Corporation. "We are confident the 9600 Series will not only meet, but exceed the expectations of these customers."

The 9600 Series, built at AGCO's Independence, Missouri plant, has four distinct new models in seven configurations. The 9630, at 133 PTO HP, the 9650, at 147 PTO HP, the 9670, at 170 PT HP and the 9690, at 191 PTO HP offer several outstanding features as standard equipment; including the full powershift transmission, an improved deluxe, iso-mounted cab and an air-cooled, turbocharged diesel engine.

Providing 18 forward and nine reverse speeds, the new full powershift transmission allows shifting on-the-go with single-lever electronic control. This electronic shifting, regulated by a microprocessor, effectively and accurately provides a vast range of forward and reverse speed increments. The same lever controls shuttle shifting from forward to reverse without clutching.

Pulse shifting and electronic control allow the automatic "speed matching" feature to efficiently and instantly match transmission gear to engine speed and ground speed. Preselected forward or reverse shuttle speeds make frequent speed and direction changes easy for loader applications.

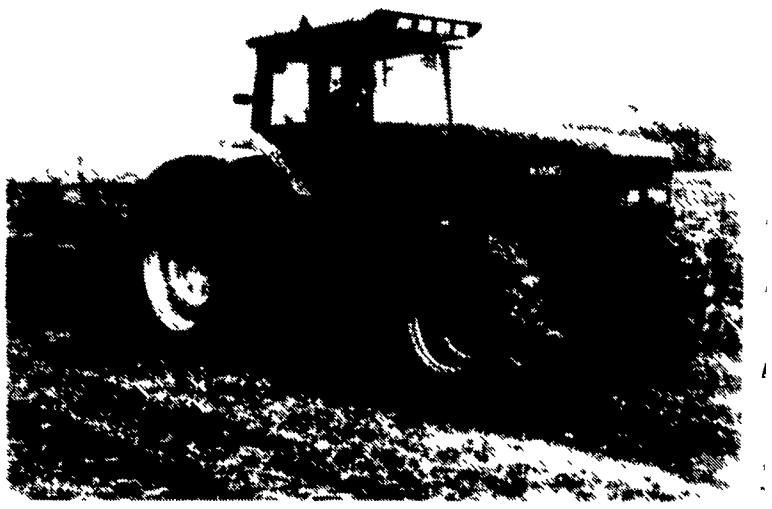
"The new full powershift transmission is just one of the high-tech features that separates the 9600 series from the competition," said Shumejda. "The farmer will get more work done faster with the full powershift feature and will be much more comfortable doing it with the improved deluxe cab."

The cab-forward design of the 9600 Series provides a smoother, more comfortable ride. Fifteen inches farther forward and two inches higher than previous models, the cab's location allows for a better view of what is in front and to the sides. It also greatly improves the line of sight to the rear hitch. A Grammer air-ride seat with automatic load control swivels to the right 10 degrees and left 20 degrees, making it easier to see your work and convenient for entering and exiting the cab. A folding passenger seat with a seatbelt has been added to the left console.

The throttle and transmission controls have been consolidated in the operator's seat itself. Located in the seat's right-hand control console, this arrangement makes shifting movements comfortable and logical and single gear selection is easy in rough field conditions.

A one-piece hood that tilts up from the back and a nose cowling that removes without tools, make for easy access to the Deutz in-line six cylinder, air-cooled, turbocharged diesel engine. This rugged, low-maintenance, state-of-the-art engine is designed to develop high torque rise while being fuel efficient.

The optional all-wheel-drive (standard on the 9690) has been redesigned to allow on-the-go engagement for added convenience.



The AGCO Allis 9690 at 191 PTO HP with full powershift transmission is one of four distinct models in an all-new high-horsepower tractor series ranging from 133 to 191 PTO HP. The advanced full powershift transmission has 18 forward and nine reverse speeds that allow the operator to shift into any gear in any direction, without clutching. The 9690's cab-forward design, sloped hood, and rerouted exhaust stack provide an unobstructed view of the field. A low-maintenance, turbocharged Deutz air-cooled engine is standard across the 9600 Series.

Smith's Implements Receives Award

MERCERSBURG (Franklin Co.) — At a special awards banquet for qualifying John Deere Dealerships in Nashville, Tenn., Smith's Implements, Inc. was the recipient of the Parts Master/Service Master Award.

Receiving the awards for the company were Ross A. Smith, vice president, and Terrance Peck, parts department manager. Presenting the awards for the John Deere Company were Larry Hodel, presenting to Ross Smith, Dave Draper presented to Terrance Peck. Both Hodel and Draper are managers in the aftermarket division of John Deere Company.

Farm Credit Employees Receive Exceptional Performance

LEWISBURG (Union Co.) — Pam Books-Mallott, loan professor supervisor for Northeastern Farm Credit, ACA and Susan Birdsall, loan processor of the Towanda branch office, recently received a Distinguished Service Award from the Farm Credit Bank of Baltimore.

The award was presented to Books-Mallott and Birdsall by Robert T. Reich, president of the Northeastern Farm Credit, ACA, in recognition of their contribution toward enhanced efficiency in the credit delivery process.

As a result of their contribution to testing a computer program for loan document origination, Farm Credit borrowers continue to receive prompt, reasonably priced credit services in spite of ever increasing regulatory burdens being imposed on all lenders. The Distinguished Service Award is one of the highest forms of recognition for employees within the Baltimore Farm Credit District.

One-Pass Tillage Tool From Krause

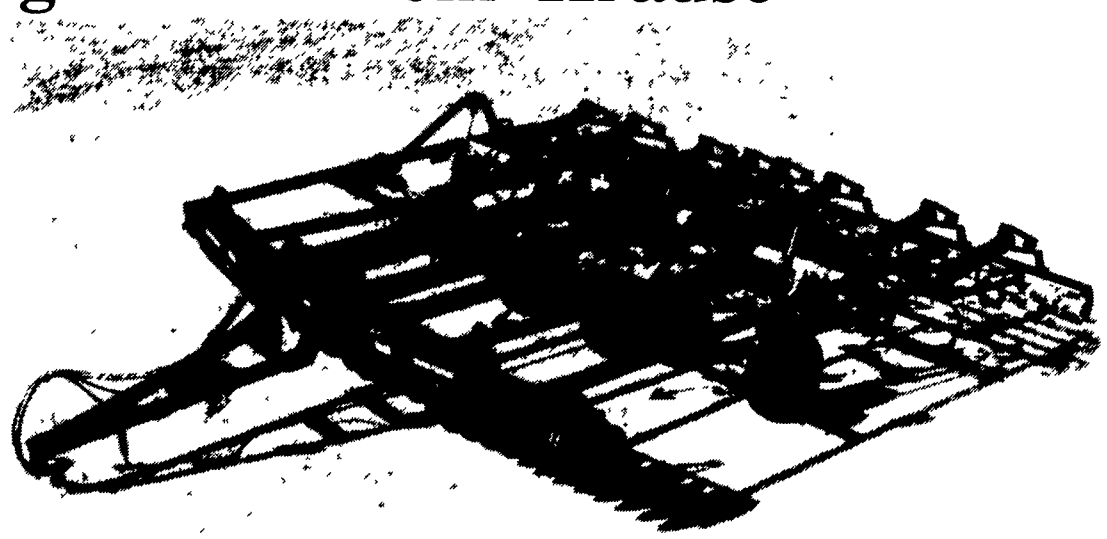
HUTCHINSON, Kan. — Krause Corporation recently introduced a new residue management and one-pass tillage tool, the 6100 Series Landsman.

Designed from the ground up with conservation farming practices in mind, the Landsman offers many unique features geared toward higher residue farming practices.

The spring loaded disc gang in front utilizes special 20-inch extra-low concavity disc blades that size residue while leaving a higher percentage of residue on the surface. Depth control of the disc gang is provided by a simple screw adjustment or a new hydraulic disc gang adjustment feature is optional. The hydraulic gang depth control feature is an aid to residue management allowing the disc gangs to be used when needed in heavy residue and raised in areas where not needed.

Five ranks of field cultivator shanks follow the disc gangs, with 52 inches of space between the discs and the first rank of shanks. This provides ample room for undisturbed application of incorporated herbicides and more uniform weed control. Standard shank spacing of 9 inches improves residue flow through and preserves more residue on the soil surface. The Landsman can be equipped with an optional sixth shank beam that allows 7-inch spacing or 9-inch high-residue spacing for extreme residue conditions.

Shank choices include standard spring cushioned C-shanks or 5/8-inch thick K-Tines, both edge-on formed. New, optional two-piece K-Tines with rugged 1/2-inch x 3-inch upper leaf springs and 5/8-inch thick edge-on formed lower shanks are also available for more aggressive tillage situations. Both the K-Tine and two-piece K-Tine are warranted against breakage for 3 years.



A new residue management and one-pass tillage tool, the 6100 Series Landsman, offers many unique features geared toward higher residue farming practices. Five ranks of field cultivator shanks follow the disc gangs, with 52 inches of space between the discs and the first rank of shanks. This provides ample room for undisturbed application of incorporated herbicides and more uniform weed control.

The Landsman's heavy "backbone" primary frame is constructed of steel tubing which is 3 inches x 5 inches on Models 6110-6115, 3 inches x 6 inches on Models 6118-6124, and a massive 4 inches x 8 inches on Models 6127-6142. Shank underframe clearance is a residue tolerant 25 inches. Top mounted hydraulic rockershafts absorb and transfer load to reduce frame flexing.

Walking beam tandems provide excellent flotation and field performance for the Landsman. One-point remote hydraulic depth control provides for easily accessible one-step adjustment.

19 More Reasons

Why you should buy Big Dutchman from Hershey Equipment

NEW CONSTRUCTION OR REMODEL WORK

1. Big Dutchman and Hershey Equipment is #1 in owner loyalty. More people buy Big Dutchman when they remodel than any other system.
2. Our Profit-tier system adapts to your old building.
3. Re-use your old corners to save money.
4. Big Dutchman's superior suspension system keeps the cages from sagging between stands. Competitive systems sag.
5. Lower maintenance costs. Talk to our customers - Then talk to theirs!
6. Better Performance! This isn't just talk. Ask your feed company to show you records from a Big Dutchman system to compare to a competitive system.
7. Big Dutchman high lip feed trough is designed to reduce spillage into the walkways. Look at a competitors walkway and measure the thickness of wasted feed.
8. Your old hoppers aren't wore out. Save money and reuse them on your new system.
9. We have our own installation crews to be sure the equipment is properly installed. Competition hires outside crews.
10. Eggs move gently from the birds, to the belts and thru the collector unit. The eggs are not like balls in a bowling alley as in some competitive systems.
11. Incredible! New left hand drive allows feed chain to travel up to 120 F.P.M.
12. Your present gearboxes and motors can be re-used to save money.
13. The Big Dutchman chain feeder gives 2½ times more feeder space than the grind auger.
14. It's a proven fact. Chain feeder systems use less electricity.
16. The sliding door on a Big Dutchman system is easy to open and close and it stays closed.
17. The Big Dutchman collector is the best there is. Don't accept an imitation.
18. Our cage design allows eggs to roll front and out of the cage, not get stepped on and cracked by birds as in competitive cages.

Many Oppose Use Of Sludge As Fertilizer

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Despite research and improved technologies that eliminate many health and environmental concerns, opposition to the use of sewage sludge as fertilizer appears to have grown across Pennsylvania.

A recent statewide survey conducted by rural sociologists in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences shows 45 percent of Pennsylvanians oppose the application of treated sewage sludge on farmland and forests, compared to 34 percent who favor it. Twenty-one percent have no opinion.

In a similar 1980 survey, 38 percent expressed opposition to land application of sewage sludge, 35 percent supported it, and 27 percent were undecided.

Just as animal manure is used to fertilize cropland, treated human waste can be a valuable fertilizer and soil amendment. But urban sewage sludge also contains cleaning materials, chemicals, and other potentially hazardous substances from homes, institutions, businesses, and factories.

Treatment processes are available that reduce the risk posed by disease-causing organisms and environmental toxins found in sewage sludge. Techniques also exist for applying sewage sludge beneath the soil surface, virtually eliminating nuisance odors.

"Various governmental agencies are responsible for regulating the land application of sewage sludge and for monitoring its environmental effects," said Dr. Donald Crider, professor emeritus or rural sociology, who conducted the survey with Dr. Fern Willits. "Still, despite the safeguards provided by science and government, the idea of using human waste for fertilizer continues to concern many people."

Significant differences of opinion were noted between those of different gender, age, education level, and place of residence. "Men were more than twice as likely as women to favor applying sewage sludge to farms and forests in their counties," said Crider.

Others more likely to favor the practice were middle-aged respondents, rural residents, and those with higher education levels and incomes.

"The need to find disposal alternatives for an increasingly large volume of waste and the sizable differences of opinion among different groups in the population promise to keep this issue alive for many decades to come," Crider said.

Corn Grower President Has Model Conservation Farm

EVERETT NEWSWANGER Managing Editor

QUARRYVILLE (Lancaster Co.)— If weeds are not controlled you are going to get a greatly reduced crop The most single limiting factor in corn production is water and weeds take it

The author of this quote Grant Troop president Pennsylvania Master Corn Growers knows how to grow a good crop of corn But he is also very sensitive to the environmental health of his land

Weed control depends on chemicals Troop said But with what EPA has done in the last 20 years a lot of safety has been insured to the environment The chemicals that are dangerous are not on the market anymore Many of the earlier chemicals I didn t use anyway because of the suspicion of danger I use all the safeguards and recommendations on the label and I feel I m doing a safe job of farming It works for me

Troop graduated from Penn State with a degree in agronomy in 1973 and immediately started to work the family farm west of Georgetown Before his time the farm was a concentrated livestock operation and there were only four large fields on the farm These fields contained gullies deep enough to bury a car in them But strip and contour farming were instituted and developed in the 60s Now the land is in 21 small fields and can be called a model conservation

Between The Rows

Dr Greg Roth Penn State Agronomy Assistant Professor

UNIVERSITY PARK Centre Co.)— The year will cent only go down in the of two seasons for corn producers in Pennsylvania

On one hand there in south ern counties had generally excellent growing conditions and very good yields For those in central to northern counties a short cool season magnified any management mistakes and reduced yields and grain quality

There s something to be learned from both seasons In the southern areas the record yields reflected the use of continually improving management and hybrids combined with a reasonably good season

Another factor that contributed to the high yields was cooler than normal temperatures While it s true that corn grows well on hot summer nights these high temperatures also cause the plants to burn off most of the sugars produced by photosynthesis during the day

Cool temperatures reduce this process known as dark respiration and these sugars eventually contribute to higher yields

1993 Pennsylvania Machinery Custom Rates

MACHINERY CUSTOM RATES

By Heather Buckley
Agricultural Statistician

The custom rates shown are averages from voluntary reports by custom operators throughout Pennsylvania. Most of the rates are stated per acre, cwt., ton, bale, or bushel rather than per hour to reduce the variation due to machinery size. Individual rates vary due to differences in working conditions, services performed, or even the operator's eagerness to do custom work. Therefore, the average rates shown should not be considered absolute indications of fair charges.

Average rates are shown separately for two regions of the state, labeled "Mountain" and "Valley". The differences in rates between regions reflect differences in terrain, soils and alternative opportunities for the labor and equipment used. Figures labeled "The State" represent the straight average of all reports used regardless of geographic location.

Custom rates are slightly higher this year. Of the 68 rates reported, 60 percent have increased, 21 percent have decreased, and the remaining 19 percent are the same as last year. The overall average is up 2 percent from the previous year. This percentage increase was computed by adding the rates for all jobs, regardless of basis of charge, and dividing by last year's comparable total.

District Announces Scholarship Winners

LEESPORT (Berks Co.) — The Berks County Conservation District is pleased to announce scholarship award winners for 1993.

The annual banquet will be March 29 at the Kutztown Grange Hall. At that time, the winners will be announced and introduced. -

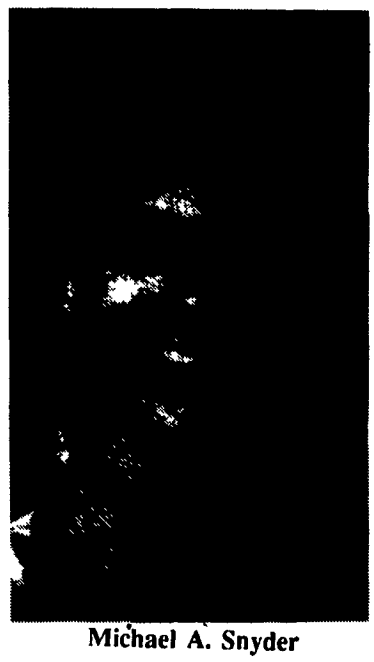
The conservation district will award two individuals with $1,000 toward their first year of college. This is the sixth year that these scholarships have been awarded to outstanding youth in Berks County.

Victoria Lee Kline will be graduated from Exeter High School this year and plans to continue her education with a major wildlife biology at the University of Idaho.

Victoria is the daughter of James P. and Lois M. Kline of Nicol Drive, Reading.

This young student athlete has excelled in the classroom, in cross-country, the National Honor Society, the Environmental Club, and Girl Scout activities. She has received honors at the local, regional, and state levels in all of these activities.

Victoria Lee Kline



Michael A. Snyder

Her involvement in the environmental discovery program led to work as a teaching aid at Nolde Forest and a state conservation award. She was on the Exeter High School team at Berks County Envirothon two years.

The essay she wrote in her application shows how much she appreciates the environment and how important it is for us to appreciate and conserve what we have for our future enjoyment and survival.

Michael A. Snyder will be garduated from Tulpehocken High School this year and plans to continue his education at the University Park Campus of the Pennsylvania State University School of Agriculture with a major in environmental resource management.

He is the son of Robert A. and Nancy A. Snyder of Camp Swatara Road, Myerstown.

Michael has been on the student council four years. He has won honors for his efforts on some of the council projects. Michael was on both the soccer and tennis teams. He was given scholar awards in 1991 and 1992.

His essay shows he realizes what the balance of nature means and that he is willing to do his part to educate others in reversing some wasteful trends.

Egg Campaign Kicks Off

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Northeast egg producers announced the kickoff of the Northeast egg promotion campaign.

"The mission of the campaign is to take advantage of some of the largest media markets in the country and communicate pro-egg messages to consumers," said Paul Sauder (R.W. Sauder, Inc.), one of the cochairmen of the campaign. The first year of the program will focus on media relations in Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, and Washington.

"A regional promotion campaign will amplify, not replace, the promotion efforts being conducted by American Egg Board and some of the state organizations in the northeast region," said Paul Hann (Purina Mills, Inc.), the other co-chairman. "At the same time, it will give states that don't have established promotion programs a way to participate in increasing the consumption of eggs."

Sauder said, "In launching a join promotion campaign, Northeast egg producers will be able to target their customers with the specific messages that are important to them. They will also increase the value of their investment in the checkoff by increasing the power of their impact on consumers."

Organizing the campaign was a grassroots effort by Egg Association of America, Maryland Egg Council, New England Poultry Association, Pennsylvania Poultry Association, and individual egg producers.

New Pest Regs April 15

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — New U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) Worker Protection Standards for agricultural workers exposed to pesticides will be implemented starting April 15.

"These new standards are meant to reduce workers' risk of illness or injury from pesticide exposure," said Kerry Hoffman, pesticide education coordinator with Penn State's Pesticide Education Program. "The new rules cover workers who handle, mix, load, and apply pesticides as well as workers in pesticide-treated fields, forests, nurseries, and greenhouses."

The new regulations expand requirements for warnings about pesticide applications, using personal protective equipment, restricting entry into recently treated areas, decontaminating treated areas, coping with emergencies, maintaining contact with handlers of highly toxic pesticides, and giving workers pesticide safety training.

The rules also require substantial revision of nearly 10,000 agricultural pesticide labels.

"Labels now must include information about toxicity, appropriate personal protective equipment and how much time must pass before it's safe to enter a recently treated area," said Hoffman.

The EPA is implementing the Worker Protection Standards in two phases. "Pesticides with the new label statements will be sold starting April 15, 1993," Hoffman said. "When farm workers use products with a new label, they must follow that label's directions."

The rest of the requirements become enforceable starting April 15, 1994. Beginning then, employers must provide workers with decontamination facilities, pesticide safety training and information, notification of applications and information about pesticides used, clean and safe personal protective equipment, and emergency assistance if required

EPA developed these rules with non-English speaking workers in mind. "Employers must give warnings, information and training in a manner workers understand," Hoffman said. "If workers speak only Spanish, the training must be conducted in that language. This ensures that workers aren't just told about the risks but that they understand them."

The rules will be enforced by the states through cooperative enforcement agreements with EPA.

Several pesticide uses are exempt from the regulations, including government-sponsored pest control, research on unregistered pesticides, post-harvest and livestock uses and use on or near pasture and rangeland, rights-of-way and structures, and on vertebrae pests. Use of attractants/repellants in traps and use near homes, gardens, and lawns also are exempt from the regulations.

Case Introduces Automatic Round Baler

RACINE, Wis. — J I Case is adding a new Case International 8465 Automatic round baler to its line of hay and forage products.

With this new "smart baler," an operator need only steer the tractor, stop forward travel when the bale chamber has a full bale, and touch a button to get uniformly shaped bales 61.5 inches wide that measure up to 75 inches in diameter and weigh up to 2,200 pounds.

The 8465 Automatic does all the work and monitors its electronic circuits to give large-acreage hay producers and custom operators a new level of baling productivity.

The 8465 Automatic is our flagship round baler," said David Hess, Case product manager-hay and forage. "It's a more sophisticated machine than its companion model, the Case International 8465 Tractor Hydraulic round baler, also offered in the Case IH equipment line."

In addition to the increased automation provided by the 8465 Automatic, its controls are designed to improve performance and reliability in a greater variety of crop conditions than other round balers. The core of those enhanced controls is a membrane touchpad and liquid crystal display that are easier to operate and more informative than indicator lights. All electronic and auto-sequencing components are housed in the sealed control box for greater reliability.

Bale cycling — from drive declutching, wrapping, tailgate operation and kicker ejection to re-engagement of the pickup and belt drives for the next bale — is done by touching the "Auto Cycle" keypad, Hess said. For convenience, each baling function has a manual override.

When the operator touches the "test" button, the 8465 Automatic checks all of its electronic circuits, solenoids and sensors. At the touch of another button, it counts bales produced. With its new slip-clutch and hydraulic oil temperature sensors, this "smart baler" will shut itself down when clutch slippage or oil temperature is excessive.

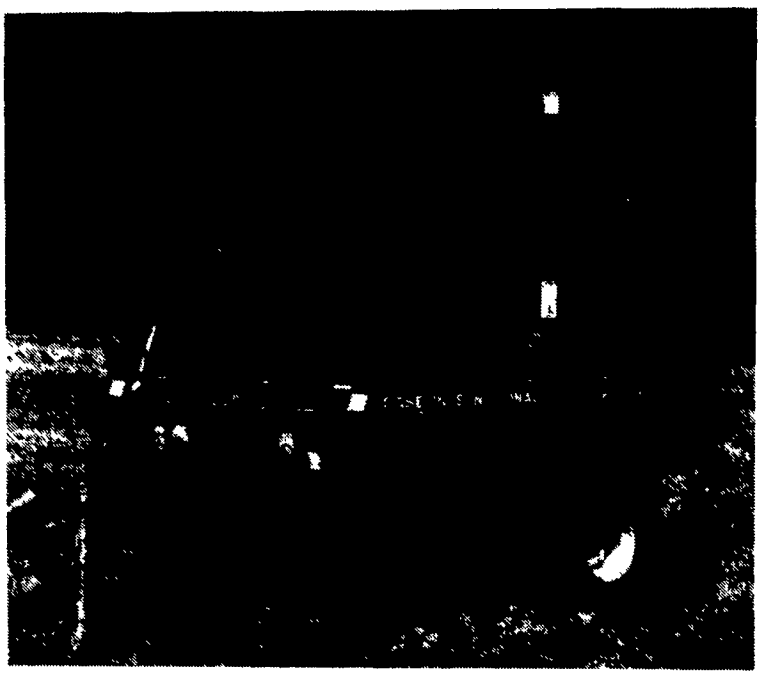
Also included on the LCD panel are improved bale-sensing and sequential driving arrows for better control of bale shape. The sequential driving arrows are a key improvement, according to Hess. "They show the operator where to steer to ensure uniform windrow pickup for optimum bale shape," Hess said.

The hydraulic system on the 8465 Automatic is self-contained, eliminating the need to connect hydraulic hoses to the tractor. Another new feature, the twine joggle, enables the operator to touch a button to apply additional twine wraps on the end of the bale.

Other performance features include a wide, four-bar, low-profile pickup with narrow-spaced tines for maximum crop retrieval and minimal leaf loss. A vertical, open-throat design feeds hay, straw, cornstalks, or other crop residue directly into the vertical bale chamber for immediate core formation.

One option available for the 8465 Automatic round baler is a mesh-wrap attachment. Mesh-wrap operation is built into the control box. Hess estimates that an 8465 Automatic with the mesh-wrap option can decrease bale wrapping and ejection time as much as 75 percent compared to conventional twine systems. "It's the ultimate in productivity," he said. "It also reduces losses during baling and storage."

Other options include hydraulic pickup lift (requires one tractor remote valve), windrow gathering wheels, and a short crop retainer for baling dry straw.



Case International 8465 Automatic round baler features sophisticated electronic monitoring and automated systems that significantly increase productivity compared to conventional balers. Uniformly shaped bales from the 8465 measure 61.5 inches wide and up to 75 inches in diameter and weigh up to 2,200 pounds.

Tioga County Conservationists Receive Awards

C.J. HOUGHTALING
Tioga Co. Correspondent

WHITNEYVILLE (Tioga Co.) — On the eve of the Blizzard of 1993, friends, family and dignitaries gathered at the Tioga County Fairgrounds to pay tribute to outstanding county conservationists.

Sponsored by agricultural agencies, awards were presented to the top farmer, forester, teacher, and eight 4-H members whose concerns for the environment are reflected in their conservation practices.

Accepting the award for 1992 Conservation Farm of the Year, Burdette Brewer said, "Conservation is a must in farming today. To save soil, get on the fields at planting and harvest time, and to make farming profitable, a farmer has to use good conservation. I am convinced conservation works. I cannot afford not to practice (it)."

Brewer and his wife Sara Mae began farming on their Jackson Township farm in 1949. In 1971, he signed up a cooperator with the Tioga County Conservation District. Since that time, Brewer has practiced good soil and water conservation on the entire farm by installing over 14,000 feet of subsurface drainage, 2,800 feet of diversion ditches, 2,000 feet of water ways and use a conservation cropping system, contour farming, and strip farming.

Together with their son Randy, the Brewers milk an 80 cow herd and work 300 acres raising crops and hay. Burdette is an active member of the Eastern Milk Producers Co-op and is a delegate for the Tioga Local. He enjoys riding motorcycle and hunting rattle snakes. The Brewers are also members of the Mansfield Seventh Day Adventist Church.

Annie Bohlin of Charleston Township was named 1992 Forest Cooperator of the Year. Of her 150-acre farm, approximately 60 acres are devoted to crops and pasture, 44 acres are woodlands, and another 46 acres are available for tree planting.

Bohlin has been actively applying a conservation plan on the crop fields by installing diversion ditches, practicing strip farming and crop rotation, developing springs, and improving wildlife habitats.

Using woodlot and wetlands management plans, Bohlin has planted red and white pines and sugar maples, with many of the maples protected by tree shelters. She has been preparing her woodlot for future timber harvest by doing timber stand improvement, cull tree removal, and forest road layout. Because of her efforts, the Bureau of Forestry has chosen her as the first landowner to receive the Forest Stewardship Award in Tioga County.

Carroll Doan receives an award for 15 years of Community Committee Service with the ASCS.

J. Dawn Bowers of Mansfield, the nutrition education adviser with the extension office in Tioga County, received the Extension Cooperator Award presented by Linda Yungwirth.

Bureau of Forestry employee Mike Palko said, "Tioga County celebrates another first" as he gives Annie Bohlin the Forest Stewardship Award. According to Palko, "Bohlin is the first landowner to be designated as such."

Outstanding 4-H'ers who received awards were, left to right, Trisha McIlwain, Ellen Norman, Elizabeth Norman, Teresa McIlwain, and Chris Niemczyk. 4-H Program Assistant Lee Hoar introduced the winners.

ASCS employee Ralph Brugger hands Ted Besanceney an award for 15 years of continuous service to the Tioga County Conservation District.

Acknowledged for their part in helping the Tioga County ASCS offices receive an award for public relations work in promoting the ASCS program are Clara Kilburn, Sherri Elder, Jim Welch, and Ken Palmer. District Director, Eileen Dewey, far right, presented the award to the group.

NEUEP Forms Egg Association Of America

WASHINGTON, D.C. — "We must be able teo adapt to change in the marketplace if eggs are to stay competitive," said Andy Wadsworth in announcing that the Northeast United Egg Producers has formed the Egg Association of America (EAA).

Wadsworth, who is chairman of EAA, said the primary purpose of the new national trade association is to promote the growth of the egg industry through ethical and sound business practices.

"We must move beyond the traditional cooperative activities and do more than struggle to preserve current market share. Our goal is to develop and implement cutting edge strategies that allow the egg industry to respond effectively to market demands and grow," Wadsworth said.

"We will ask the hard questions and be aggressive about pursuing answers that are meaningful and make sense for our industry. Our members should look for fresh programs as well as new twists on old ones to be unveiled in the coming weeks. We will seek to maximize return on members' investment in all that we do."

The Egg Association of America's programmatic emphasis will focus on four main areas: promotion, government relations, issue management, and long-range planning.

Promotion efforts will support an increase in demand for eggs and egg products. Increased demand will allow producers to be more productive without creating an oversupply, which trims prices and profits. Oversupply has been a problem in recent years, and has forced less than optimum use of resources. The Egg Association will support the Northeast Egg Promotion Campaign as well as the American Egg Board to promote egg consumption.

Government relations efforts will be directed toward creating a more favorable government/regulatory environment for the egg industry as a whole by developing contacts with key influencers at the federal and state levels. Wadsworth said, "Elected representatives, regulators, and public health officials at both the state and federal levels all make decisions that have a big impact on our ability to do business. We need to make sure they understand our industry and concerns."

Issue management efforts will help the industry, and experts such as the Egg Nutrition Center counter unfair public criticism of eggs and egg products and identify potential health and environmental problems before they can have an economic impact on producers. The Salmanella Enteritidis Pilot Project is an example of how the egg industry in the Northeast has already taken the lead to identify new methods of ensuring a safe product.

Long-range planning efforts will include analyzing and identifying areas for growth by anticipating and adapting to changes in the American food market. This will allow the Egg Association to play a proactive role in increasing the demand for eggs and egg products and formulating the best ways to meet the demands.

"By focusing on these four areas of emphasis, we can help keep the Egg Association's members competitive today, and ensure a strong, growing market into the future," Wadsworth said. "It's all in line with our unofficial motto: 'Make it Meaningful.'"

The Egg Association of America's membership includes all former NEUEP members, and is open to other egg producers, further processors and allied industry. The group looks forward to continuing its working relationship with the United Egg Producers, the American Egg Board, and state and regional industry organizations. It will consider formally rejoining with UEP in the future if governmental and industry conditions allow such a move.

Egg Association of America will continue to operate from the former NEUEP office at 808 17th Street, N.W. #200, Washington, D.C. 20006.

"Our mission is to help preserve farmland for future generations using a variety of strategies," said Michael McGrath, manager of the Aglands Preservation Office. "This recognition program is a way to say thinks to families who are helping us do our job by maintaining a life style and supporting the state's agricultural industry."

Century Farm applications are reviewed annually by a committee comprised of representatives from various agricultural and historical organizations.

Farms must include at least 10 acres of the original parcel and generate a minimum income from the sale of agricultural products in order to qualify for the program.

Recipients are presented with an engraved pewter tray and metal sign which can be displayed on the homestead. Their names also are added to a permanent plaque located at the Department of Agriculture.

employee at the Wellsboro Area High School (WAHS), this biology teacher has been the advisor to the Wellsboro High School Environthon Teams for the past two years and her teams have won the county environthon both years. Puskar has initiated several Earth Day activities in the school and community and also teaches a course on the environment at the Pennsylvania College of Technology.

An advisor to the science and juggling clubs at WAHS, Puskar lives in Wellsboro with her husband Allan and two sons.

Prior to introducing the Outstanding 4-H'ers of 1992, 4-H Program Assistant Lee Hoar announced his difficulty in narrowing the winners to one boy and one girl in each of the four categories because, in his eyes, they were all winners. Awards went to first and second year members, Trisha McIlwain of Canton and Tyler Wood of Mansfield; and third and fourth year members Ellen Norman of Liberty and Adam Landis of Roaring Branch, Green Form, Jason Mase and Elizabeth Norman, both of Liberty; and Senior Award, Teresa McIlwain of Canton and Chris Niemczyk of Mansfield.

Others recognized that evening for their outstanding service to the agricultural community were ASCS employee Clara Kilburn, Carroll Doan of Knoxville who received the Community Committee Service Award for 15 years with the ACSC, and Clint Baker for his 40 years of service as field representative for the ASCS. J. Dawn Bowers of Mansfield, nutrition education advisor with the extension office in Tioga County, received the Extension Cooperator Award.

Four ASCS employees were acknowledged for their efforts in helping the Tioga County office receive an award for best public relations work in promoting the ASCS program. Eileen Dewey, district director of ASCS, called Alara Kilburn, Sherri Elder, Jim Welch, and Ken Palmer forward to accept the award.

Singled out for his service as public director for 15 continuous years with the Tioga County Conservation District was Theodore (Ted) Besanceney. Joining the staff in 1978, he served as vice chairman for one year and chairman for five years. Active in all the conservation district activities, Besanceney has taken a special interest in the youth and education committee. He has been responsiblel for many of the conservation education programs that the district has sponsored and is currently spearheading the plans to create an outdoor conservation class room at the Tioga County Fairgrounds.

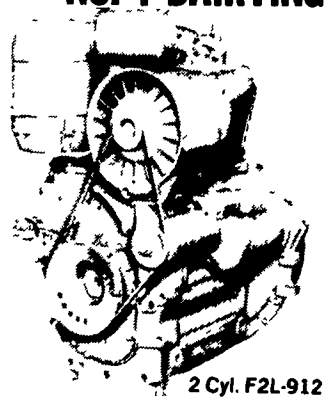
NO. 1 DAIRYING DIESEL



2 Cyl. F2L-912

KHD DEUTZ

Since 1968 F2L-912 diesels have earned the reputation as the most reliable diesel. Don't settle for less.

Continuous Duty Rating: 26.5 HP @ 1800 RPM

Fewer repair parts than comparable three-cylinder diesels - cheaper to overhaul.

It has direct injection, lube oil cooling, and oil cooled pistons. This engine has proven to survive the extreme heat of a heavy load in a small engine house better than any other engine.

BREWEX - For Use In Dairy Feeds

BREWEX is used extensively in complete dairy formulations to contribute utilizable energy. It is a price/performance value when used in dry feeds, liquid feeds and on-farm mixes.

MIX WITH DRY FEEDS: BREWEX is found in commercial pelleted rations for dairy, hogs and poultry as an energy source to replace corn. BREWEX replaces corn on a pound for pound dry basis and provides for improved pellet durability, reduced mineral segregation, dust control and improved palatability in dairy rations.

ON-FARM MIXING

A commercial Jersey dairy farm, having over ten years of experience in feeding BREWEX to partially replace corn finds that

- BREWEX replaced 5% to 10% corn/day
- BREWEX improves butterfat about 0.1%
- BREWEX mixed with forage reduces mortality due to displaced abomasum
- BREWEX helps cattle to stay on feeds

EBY ALUMINUM FLATBEDS: WE MAKE HARD WORK LOOK GOOD

On the farm or in the city, Eby aluminum flatbed bodies are built for your toughest hauling jobs. Their all-welded construction features 3" aluminum I-beam crossmembers (4" I-beams on bodies 16' and longer) on 12" centers, heavy side rub rail and aluminum diamond floor plate. A full list of options includes slated or solid aluminum sides, tool boxes and tire carrier.

Eby aluminum construction is up to 40% lighter than steel, so you get more payload capacity. The corrosion-resistant aluminum never needs painting and requires minimum maintenance but gives you maximum resale value. That's a winning combination to complement any truck.

In standard lengths to 32 feet and 5 widths from 78 to 102 inches, there's an Eby aluminum flatbed that's matched to your requirements. With Eby value and quality, hard work can look good.

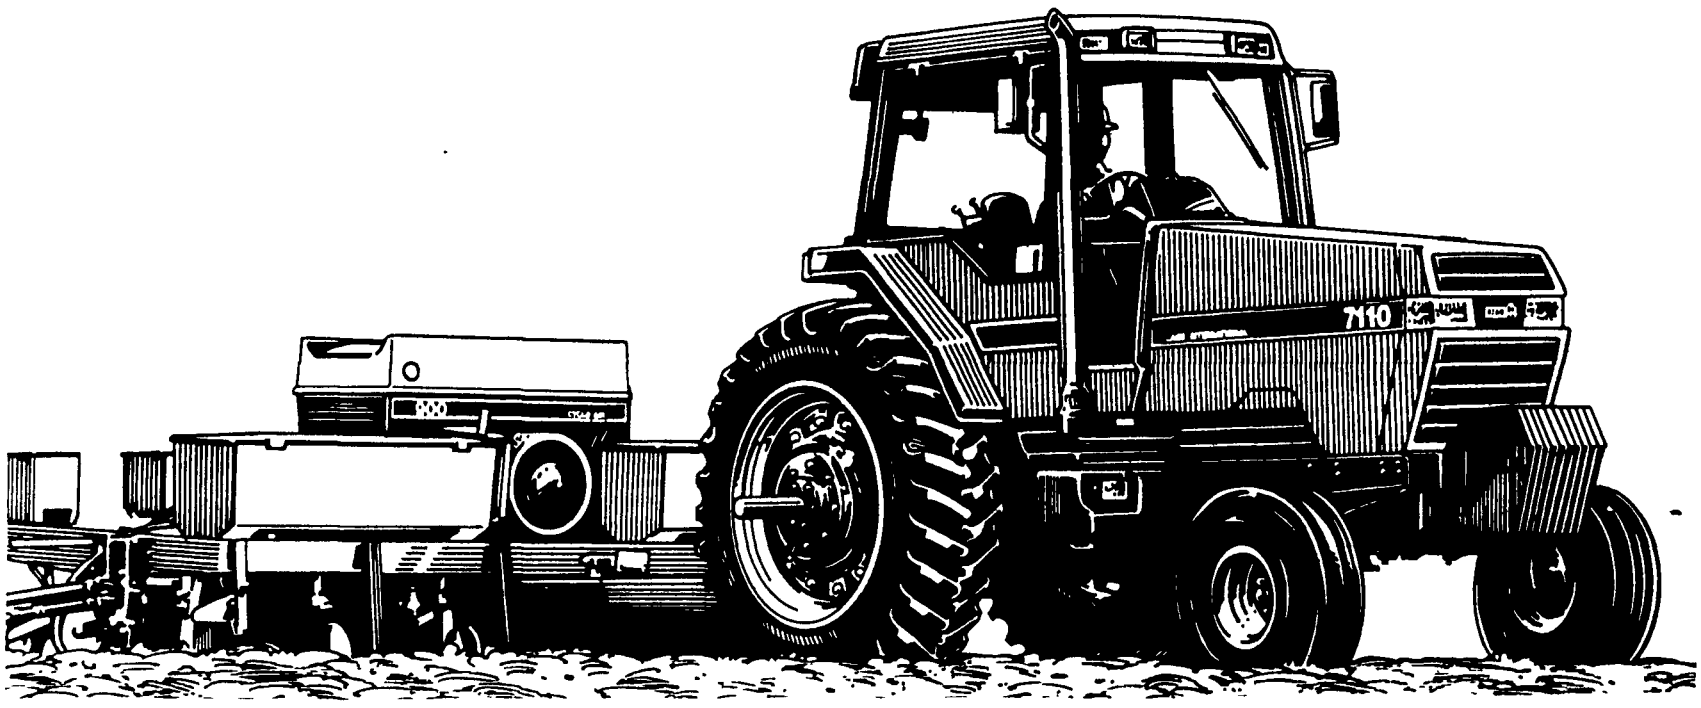
The Professionals in Farm Real Estate Service

Best Values in New Equipment

MAGNUM 7110



Case IH put more into the new MAGNUM Tractor line than any farm tractors developed in over twenty years. Here's why you'll get more out of it:

MAGNUM means more. Outstanding field performance from a new 505-cubic-inch turbocharged engine with reserve power. MAGNUM power.

The MAGNUM Tractor's powershift puts 18 speeds of shift-on-the-go workpower at your fingertips — standard. And only MAGNUM Tractors offer full powershift creeper transmission with six additional speeds from .5 to 2.1 mph for more control and performance. MAGNUM performance.

The MAGNUM Tractor's new larger cab has 48 square feet of window area — virtually unobstructed visibility — and more seating comfort. MAGNUM comfort.

It all adds up: The Case IH MAGNUM 7110 Tractor sets new standards for the 130 hp (97 kW) class — and for you. See us for details.

MAGNUM means more.

Brillion
MEETS THE CHALLENGE

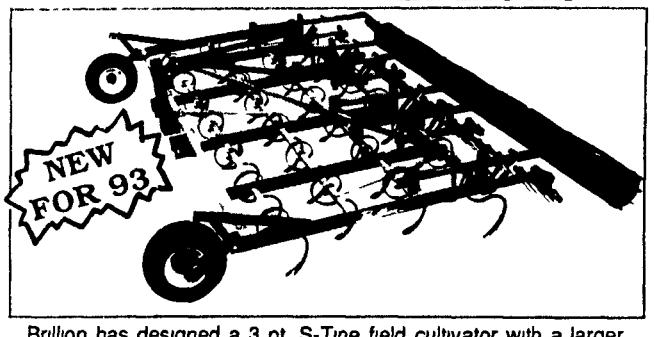
Brillion 3 PT. BASKET HARROWS



Brillion has designed a 3 pt. S-Tine field cultivator with a larger, aggressively angled 12" diameter rolling basket, a 4-bar frame that allows for either 4" or 6" tooth spacing and an adjustable leveler bar in 12', 15' and 18' sizes The distance between the four bars has been increased for the best trash flow in the industry Gauge wheels are optional

HFC FIELD CULTIVATOR

The "heart" of any field cultivator is the shank pivot point. A "bulked up" shank bracket made of cast ductile iron instead of the usual formed steel bracket, incorporated a hardened steel bushing AND a zerk grease fitting to lubricate the pivot point to reduce wear The result is thousands of acres of extended life of the shanks.

NAVIGATOR II

STRESS-FREE ROW CROP GUIDANCE

- Unique design keeps the implement parallel with the rows even when the tractor moves laterally as it drifts off course. Most other systems oversteer the toolbar which adds damaging side pressure to the stabilizing coulters
- Automatically compensates for sidehill drift.
- Eliminates excessive pull and stress on hydraulic components associated with other guidance systems.
- Very few moving parts provide smooth, friction-free lateral movement.
- Works effectively on all conventional and ridge-till cultivators, planters and 4-wheel drive articulated tractors.

Finisher Combines Secondary Tillage In Single Pass

RACINE, Wis. — The new Case International 4200 Combo-Mulch Finisher combines secondary tillage needs in a single pass, cutting time and reducing soil compaction as well as fuel and labor expenses.

The 4200 comes in six sizes from 11 feet 10 inches to 34 feet 1 inch. It is available in six configurations — two rigid and four folding. All models transport at 15 feet 11 inches or less, one of the narrowest transport widths on combination secondary tillage machines in the industry, according to Kurt Schenck, Case product manager-implements.

Regardless of size, the 4200 features a minimum 40-inch "settling zone" between the disc gang and the first cultivator rank that allows the soil to settle before herbicide application and eliminates the need for shields at recommended operating speeds.

Mechanical depth control of the gangs is easily adjusted from 2 inches below to 5.5 inches above the sweep point. This gives operators the option of raising gangs to control the retention of surface residue or to use the 4200 as a field cultivator, an option, Schenck noted, that is not often offered by other manufacturers.

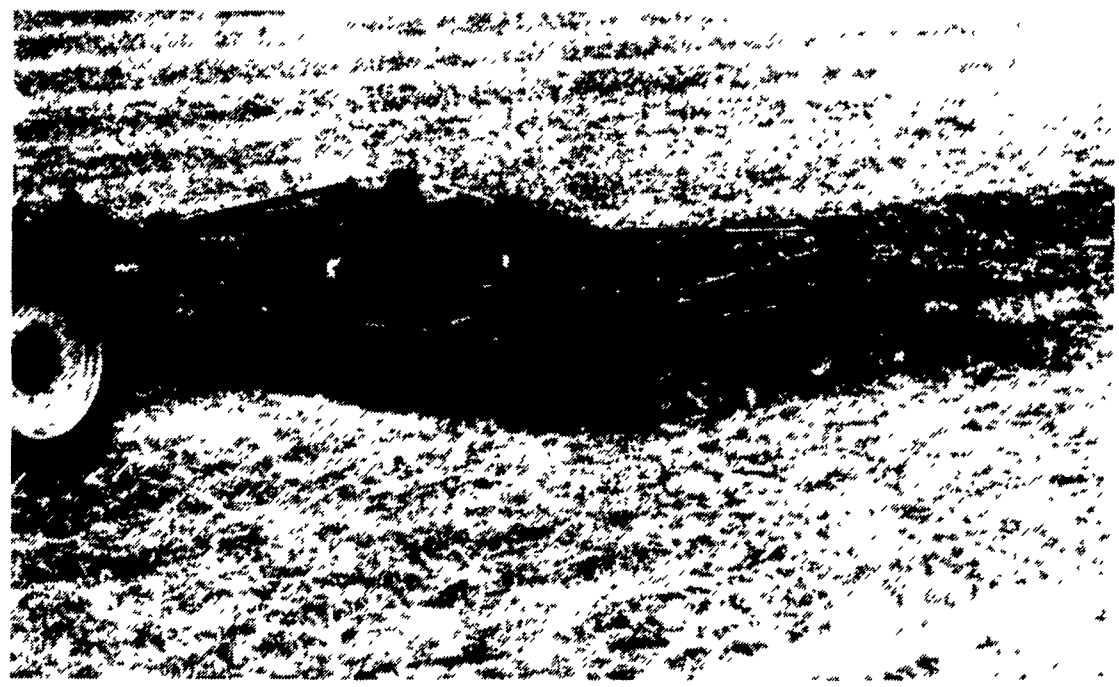
Pre-assembled, spring-cushioned gangs are set at 10-degree angles and work in conjunction with the 20-inch Earth Metal® crimped-center disc blades for aggressive cutting action to create a smoother seedbed. The spring-cushion assembly on each gang prolongs the life of the entire gang by "springing" over obstacles in the field. Independent spring-cushioning gives customers the option of installing hydraulic depth control without affecting the machine's cushioning ability.

The exclusive shank design on the 4200 Combo-Mulch Finisher gives it the ability to tackle heavy-residue conditions. Case International Vibra Shank® cultivator shanks are arranged in a four-bar ranking on three-bar spacing to provide 20.1-inch residue clearance between each cultivator shank on each rank. A 22-inch vertical shank clearance provides easy handling of cornstalks and other heavy residue.

Shank spacing is set at 6.7 inches with 7.5-inch sweeps for optimum soil preparation and chemical incorporation. The 4200 has more shanks than competitive units — from 21 on the smallest model to 61 on the largest — to ensure soil is fully cut and thoroughly mixed across the width of the machine.

The standard self-leveling hitch assures consistent depth control from the front to the rear of the 4200 and is adjusted with the hand crank provided. Walking beam axles that promote even stirring depth are also standard on the main frames and wings of all models except the 4221, which is equipped with single-axle wing wheels.

Six leveling attachments are available for the 4200 Combo-Mulcher Finisher: three-bar adjustable coil tine harrow, five-bar adjustable spike harrow, single-bar peg harrow, double rolling basket, Bervac harrow and Fuerst harrow. The unit can be ordered without a leveling attachment so it can be retrofitted regionally.



As the name implies, the Case International 4200 Combo-Mulch Finisher combines mulching and finishing into one operation to provide significant savings in time, fuel, and labor. It comes in six sizes and six configurations, all of which transport at 15 feet 11 inches or less.

12-Foot Disc Mower Conditioner With Center-Pivot Steering

RACINE, Wis. — The all-new Case International 12-foot disc mower conditioner, Model 8312, is the first Case IH disc mower conditioner to feature hydraulic center-pivot steering with a mechanical driveline.

Other important features of the new unit include its 12-foot cutting width, automatic roll separation, and cutterbed advancements. The unit is designed for use with an 85-plus horsepower tractor with 1,000 rpm PTO and two hydraulic outlets.

"We've married the cutting advantages of rotary mower conditioners with the maneuverability of hydraulic center-pivot steering found on sickle-bar mower conditioners. This gives farmers the best of both worlds," said David Hess, Case product manager-hay and forage. "With the Case International 8312 Mower Conditioner, customers can mow in conditions a sickle bar can't handle — dense, wet, downed, and tangled crops or fields plagued by rodent or fire ant mounds. And, they can do it faster.

"Our hydraulic center-pivot steering lets the operator cut up and down the same side of the field. On-the-go positioning is a one-lever operation, which is handy when you need to adjust for sidedraft on hills or move around obstacles like trees or fence rows. Off-the-field movement is equally convenient, since overall transport width is only 12.5 feet, just slightly more than a conventional 9-foot machine," he said.

The design of the mechanical driveline on the 8312 provides unique advantages, according to Hess. The gearbox, which pivots in conjunction with tongue swing to reduce driveline angles, provides belt-drive power to the cutterbed and hay conditioner roll drives. Belts are high-load carrying reinforced-fiber powerbands for long life. The entire driveline is slip- and overrunning-clutch protected. "These are features that ensure smooth, reliable performance," said Hess.

Another design feature on the 8312 is the overhead mainframe header suspension. Integrated header components are separate from the mainframe. Free-header flotation promotes uniform cutting with minimal scalping.

Advancements in the modular spur gear cutterbed on the 8312 include wider gear teeth for dependability and load-carrying capability, larger idler gear bearings than used on competitive units, and a higher-grade finish on the gear teeth to minimize cutterbed contamination and reduce noise. A full-width, steel cradle protects the cutterbed assembly from wear or damage.

Eight heat-treated oval discs, each with two reversible knives, operate at 2,600 rpm. Eight replaceable skid shoes and rock guards are standard. End discs include an anti-wrap cage and crop slinger disc to improve crop flow and reduce recutting. For easy servicing, disc assemblies and adjacent idler gears are individually accessed by folding up front curtains which are held in position, during field operation, with magnetic catches.

Hay is conditioned by intermeshing, 110-inch-wide rolls driven through a gearbox and enclosed chain case. Adjustable roll spacing and roll tension on the 8312 provide uniform drying with minimal leaf loss. Adjustable baffles enable an operator to lay 36-inch windrows or swaths up to 106 inches. For non-plugging operation, automatic roll separation is standard.

Soybean Association Opposes Tax

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — The American Soybean Association (ASA) has joined with a dozen other agricultural associations in opposing the suggested 525 percent increase in inland waterways fuel taxes contained in the Administration's economic proposal.

In a letter delivered to members of several congressional committees, the farm groups stressed the tax increase was neither fair nor well-reasoned.

"Our comprehensive inland waterways system provides U.S. agriculture with a great competitive advantage over other countries, but this tax would put our export competitiveness at risk," the letter reads. "It will mean lost jobs, lost exports and lost farm income at a time when we can ill afford any such losses."

Agricultural products comprise nearly 35 percent of all products moved on inland waterways, and more than half of all export grain moves by barge. The coalition said that under the proposed tax arrangement, the cost of barging grain would conservatively increase about 10 cents per bushel in addition to the proposed 10 cents per gallon BTU tax. Fuel costs of a typical barge movement on the Mississippi River would increase by $70,000.

"Asking farmers to pick up the tab on this tax is out of the question," said ASA First Vice President and South Dakota soybean farmer Larry Diedrich. "Increased transportation costs will be passed on to us in terms of lower prices and higher input costs. And the tax does not take into consideration the likely increase in deficiency payments that will result from lower prices."

The coalition also points out that the tax works at cross purposes with the Administration's environmental objectives. Barge transportation uses less fuel per ton-mile, creates less air and noise pollution, uses less steel and other materials per unit of cargo-carrying capacity, and claims a superior safety record in petroleum and hazardous material movements.

BRILLION SURE-STAND GRASS SEEDERS

REDESIGNED FOR THE 1990's

SS10 equipped with optional brome box, track removers, acremeter, 9 5L tires

Grass seed is a very expensive commodity By properly placing the grass seed in the top ½ " of a properly prepared seedbed you will realize maximum seed germination
Because of Brillion's precision placement of the seeds, seeding rates can often be cut to nearly half of the rates previously used In many cases the savings in seed alone will pay for a "Sure-Stand" Seeder in just a short time

SALE PRICE $5,995

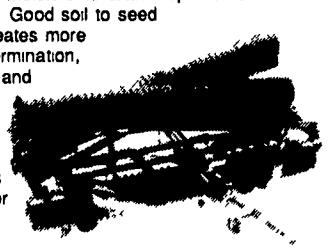
BRILLION PULVERIZERS

Good yields start with a properly prepared seedbed. A firm seedbed is critical to maintain a uniform planting depth The seedbed should be firm with fine soil particles at seed depth and should have a loose mulch on the surface to retard evaporation and conserve moisture.
Some of the most valuable soil nutrients are locked in the clods left in your field The Brillion Pulverizer crushes clods to release those nutrients for use by growing plants At the same time air pockets are eliminated and moisture is drawn up the root zone by capillary action Good soil to seed contact creates more uniform germination, pollination and maturity... and that means increased crop yields and greater profits



IN STOCK; 21', 23' & 25' X-Fold Pulverizers

The VacuMeter is light-years ahead of the Finger Pickup and competitive meters in versatility, accuracy and speed

Access to the VacuMeter System is straight forward, so seed disks are easy to change. Note the simple design featuring only one moving part — the seed disk itself.

No tools needed—low maintenance design
No tools are required with the VacuMeter system when you need to change from one type or size of seed to another. Even the brush that holds the seed in the meter reservoir is easy to change.

Seed disks are made of space-age plastic and are the only moving part of the system. They require little maintenance compared to the constant demands of the finger pickup meter.

Seed disks are available for many row-crop seeds and sizes

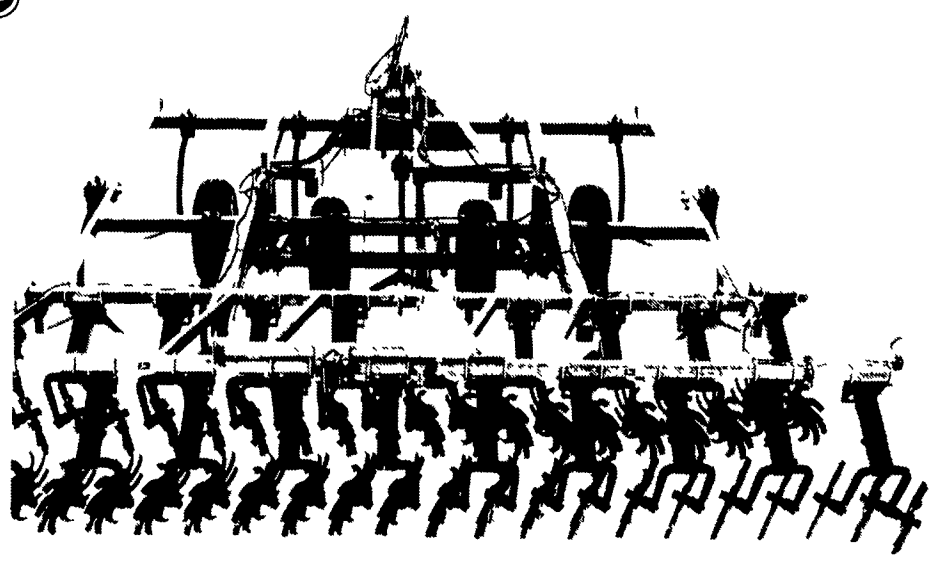
550 MULCH MASTER



We reinvented the wheel so you can leave more residue. The key to the Mulch Master's residue-saving performance is the double rank of patented cupped-tooth incorporator wheels. Their churning, digging action kicks buried residue back up to the surface. Many field tests actually show higher residue levels after a Mulch Master pass.

Wide, 24-inch sweeps lift and loosen soil, undercut young weeds. Standards provide 28 inches of vertical clearance. Optional spring-reset standards have 550 pounds of trip-force.

In Stock: 9 Shanks, 20-In. Spacing, 33 Incorporating Wheels 12 Ft. 8-In Working Width

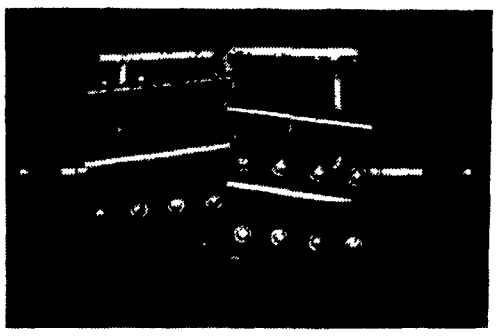
THE CLAAS HARVESTER

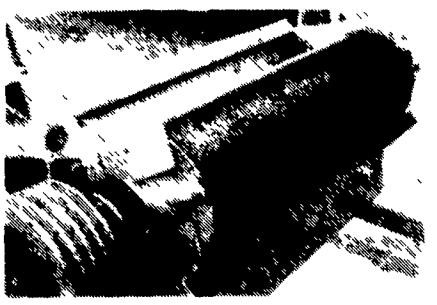
MAXIMUM FEED QUALITY

To ensure maximum feed quality from maize it is vital to crack every kernel. Digestion of uncracked maize falls as the maize becomes drier Independent trials have shown the Claas corn cracker to be close to 100% effective From the cylinder the corn passes through the two large diameter rollers with saw tooth profiles The rollers run at different speeds to intensify the grinding effect and open up each kernel It is a fairly tough process so the latest generation of corn crackers take account of the wear involved on the rollers Nothing can reduce the wear but Claas have cut the cost of repair by making the outer sleeve replaceable The shaft, drive pulley and bearings can all be reused which cuts down repair bills dramatically Adjusting the distance between the two rollers is accomplished by turning two handles, easily accessible behind the cab In no time at all the degree of cracking can be matched to the ripeness of the crop



RELIABILITY

The CLAAS Cutterbox is a unique balanced design using 2 knives in a V configuration. This forces the cutting action toward the center instead of the outside. This is the secret of their horsepower requirement and good quality of cut.



The CLAAS® Quadrant 1200 square baler — The new standard equipment for commercial operators

CLAAS doesn't have to sell a commercial operator on the advantages he gets from large, densely-packed square bales.

Yes, the Quadrant 1200 delivers the density commercial operators want. Yes, its bales inhibit spoilage by keeping the air out. Yes, they preserve quality because they minimize nutrient loss

The 1200 also offers the high production capacities you demand. Its 4 ft x 2¼ ft x up to 8 ft. long bales effectively increase storage space and dramatically increase transport capacities — all at a high productivity rate. And you know what this means to your bottom line

The Quadrant makes easy work of dry hay, haylage and silage crops —whatever you've got And it bales as much of it as you've got CLAAS's shaft-driven knotters have earned a worldwide reputation for reliability and low maintenance Other notable features are its 3-stage pre-chamber, 78" wide pickup, powerful transmission, heavy-duty worm gear, 1000 rpm pto, hydraulic density control, capacity for up to 24 balls of sisal or plastic twine, and of course 6 dependable CLAAS shaft-driven knotters.

Production capacity. Convenience handling and storage. Economical transport. Density and quality A better bottom line.

For more information about the Quadrant and how it can meet your commercial needs, contact the CLAAS dealer listed below.

Incidently, CLAAS quality is also available in a smaller Quadrant model designed for dairy operators.

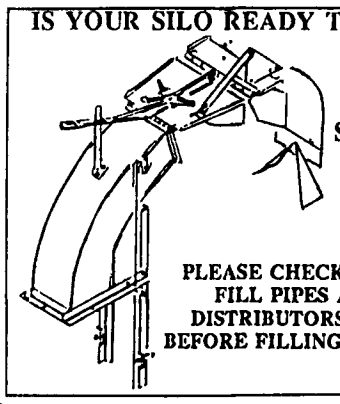
ATTENTION FARMERS
Strengthen And Reseal Your Silo With Shotcrete

STRONGER AND WILL OUT LAST PLASTER

IS YOUR SILO READY TO BE FILLED WITH GRASS SILAGE?



PLEASE CHECK YOUR FILL PIPES AND DISTRIBUTORS NOW BEFORE FILLING SEASON

S&S Silo Service prepares the silo surface by using a 3,000 lb. pressure washer, thus making the silo moist, making a much better surface to bond shotcrete. After shotcreting, S&S always takes away any roughness by applying a steel trowel finish.

The excellent bonding of shotcrete to the silo will keep out moisture and prevent mold from growing on the side of the silo.

CONCRETE REASONS WHY A NEW POURED CONCRETE SILO IS YOUR BEST INVESTMENT...

A. Enhancement of cash flow. Improved forage quality results in consistent, and increased milk production.

B. "Safe Silo" Our silos meet or exceed industry standards, reducing/protecting lender liability.

C. Initial Cost. Used or cheap pre-fab silos may have a lower initial cost, but based upon useful life, the new poured concrete silo will have a lower annual cost: due to longer life and lower maintenance costs.

D. Residual Value. Our new, poured concrete silos are built for "generations of use", and enhance the future value of the farm.

E. Storage Losses Reduced. Poured concrete silos consistently out-perform all other methods of storing and preserving the total digestible nutrients in forage crops.

F. Protecting Forage Quality. Oxygen and heat cause the most damage to stored silage and haylage. Our poured concrete silos are the very best system to PROTECT YOUR FORAGE QUALITY... "NOBODY PROTECTS FORAGE QUALITY LIKE WE DO...NOBODY"

NO USED SILOS!
NO PREOWNED SILOS!

ROCKY POINT FARM

Tom Summers, Left; (H.C. Summers Inc.), Chuck Fry and Gary Payne, right; who has assisted the Frys for 25 years.

Chuck and Paula Fry, along with Chuck's parents Milton and Helen, operate Rocky Point Farm near Point of Rocks, MD. They manage a herd of 100 cows plus young stock, and farm almost 600 acres.

Chuck and Paula visited the Purina Research Center near St. Louis, Mo. in August, 1992 and returned home convinced that Ultimate EXT deserved a trial. Ultimate EXT 32 was introduced in September, 1992 and the short term results have been very encouraging and profitable.

The single group TMR consists of shelled corn, whole cottonseed, corn silage and alfalfa haylage. Four pounds of Test Cow B22 Checkers are fed to all cows in the milking parlor and the dry cows are fed D&H Concentrate, mixed hay and limited corn silage.

Chuck states "even though my cost per ton with Ultimate EXT is $70 to $80 higher than the old program (soybean meal, corn distillers, and minerals), my cost per hundredweight of milk produced has decreased six percent. My cows and heifers peak higher and consistently maintain better body condition."

H.C. Summers and Purina Mills wishes the best to the Frys and thank them for their continued patronage.
